

CIA probbers head for clash with FBI, Justice officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence is heading toward a confrontation with the Justice Department and the FBI this week, and threatens to subpoena bureau agents if they continue to withhold information on alleged illegal activity.

The committee, chaired by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, is probing reported transgressions of the CIA — including alleged assassination plots, infiltration of agents into the White House, and responsibility for the suicide of an Army biologist who was given LSD without his knowledge.

But its mandate embraces similar agencies as well, such as the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service, and the intelligence branches of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Church's committee began asking the FBI and Justice Department two months ago for information on intelligence operations involving wiretaps, bugging and harassment and infiltration of dissident groups.

He sent a strongly worded letter co-signed by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, committee vice-chairman, to Attorney General Edward H. Levi, inviting him and FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley to appear before the panel this week.

"The failure of the Justice Department and the FBI to respond fully to the committee's request has severely hampered our investigative work," the letter said.

Church told newsmen that if Levi and Kelley do not break the logjam, the Senate panel will begin subpoenaing FBI agents.

"We hope," Church said, "that it will not become a serious problem because it seems that the more serious the inquiry, that is to say, the more it has to or may have to do with improprieties, the more obstacles are put up by the Justice Department through the committee. This we can't really tolerate."

Though Church had not received a reply Friday, the Justice Department indicated Levi and Kelley will probably appear before the panel soon.

The committee was to meet again this afternoon but no witnesses were announced.

Where gas prices stop nobody seems to know

United Press International

With the travel season at its peak, the price of regular gasoline soared above 65 cents a gallon in areas of the nation this weekend. Retailers said it was certain to reach 70 cents before summer ends.

"All this talk about a 70-cent gallon, which seemed so outlandish months ago, is not that far off," said Forreth Orr, Vermont energy director.

Some dealers predicted regular will cost $1 a gallon by the end of the year. A Los Angeles dealer said if the wholesale price reaches 70 cents a gallon by Thanksgiving, as he expects, he'll charge a dollar at the pump.

But Lou Maggionto, manager of a Mobil station in Buffalo, N.Y., said motorists won't stand for it. "The American public will blow up the storage tanks first," he said.

An oil industry economist doubted the price could go to a $1. But, he said, "I cannot say verily, verily, the price can't go to a buck."

To get to $1, he said, it would require another Arab oil embargo, "wild action" on prices by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, removal of the $5.25 per barrel ceiling on "old" domestic oil and another $1 hike in the import duty and high demand.

Most dealers think the price will peak at 70 or 75 cents this year. Denzel Kennemer, who runs a Phillips station in Austin, Texas, predicted the price would jump 10 to 15 cents from the 60-cent level by September.

"I doubt we'll see $1 a gallon before the end of the year, unless we get another embargo," said another Texas retailer, Joe Zylka Jr. of Dallas. "But I do expect $1 a gallon by next summer."

A nationwide survey by UPI showed regular gasoline sold this weekend at 60 to 65 cents a gallon. But regular was as low as 53 cents at self-service or discount stations and as high as 68 cents at freeway or metropolitan stations.

"It's the highest I've ever seen," said W. Bancroft Timmons of the Alabama Motorists Association in Birmingham.

Gas price inquiry scheduled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., charged Sunday that some oil companies may have deliberately manipulated gasoline prices in order to get huge windfall profits.

The two Democratic senators said they would hold joint hearings beginning Wednesday to look into recent gasoline production cuts and price increases.

Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb will be the first witness.

The hearings will be held by Jackson's Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee and Stevenson's subcommittee on oil and gas production and distribution.

In a letter asking Zarb to appear, the senators said they were concerned about "the apparent ineffectiveness" of the FEA's regulation of the petroleum industry.

"Events of the past several weeks raise the possibility that some oil companies, apparently to maximize profits, acted deliberately to reduce gasoline supplies in order to maintain and raise prices while simultaneously building supplies of crude oil in anticipation of reaping windfall profits," the letter said.

Chairman Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., of the Senate Commerce Committee also was critical of the price increases.

Women, minorities, singles affected

Generals urge end to Army bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A committee of generals has found the army does not assign Jewish soldiers to Saudi Arabia, will not send Greeks to Turkey and vice versa, and has a disproportionate number of Spanish-surnamed personnel assigned to Latin America.

And it also found that "looks, figure and personality are considered when female personnel are nominated for assignment to high level staff."

It recommended that these, along with other cases of discrimination against minority group members, women, and even unmarried officers, stop immediately.

The study, by the General Officers' Steering Committee on Equal Opportunity, found many of these examples were in response to requests.

The committee was formed after a reporter asked at a White House news conference whether the Corps of Engineers acceded in a demand from Saudi Arabia, a Moslem country, that no Jews be assigned to foreign assistance groups there. President Ford replied that he did not know what the situation was, but ordered a check to make sure any inadvertent discrimination ended.

The generals who made the study concluded: "It must be recognized that a totally impartial policy may result in a reduction in effectiveness. On balance, the U.S. Army should be prepared to accept such a condition in order to advance equal opportunity."

The cases, and the committee conclusions regarding them, included:

— Jews not assigned to Saudi Arabia because they would not receive visas. "We should consider all personnel regardless of race, and Jewish individuals (should) be allowed to either accept the assignment or decline."

— Soldiers or dependents of Turkish extraction not assigned to Greece and those of Greek extraction not sent to Turkey. The study acknowledged soldiers might have difficulty but should be assigned and have the chance to decline.

— A "disproportionate number" of soldiers with Spanish surnames assigned to the Latin American command. Although the study felt it might save money to assign people already fluent in Spanish, "this results in a host country perception that native ability to speak Spanish is the main criteria for selection and that professional qualifications are secondary."

— Unmarried personnel not assigned to Zaire, Iran, the Netherlands and Morocco, where local customs find the single state less acceptable socially. "To preclude assignment because of marital status denies an individual's equal opportunity rights."

— Personal appearance, including figure, considered when women are nominated for high staff positions. The committee recommended a stop.

Strikers reject 'final' state offer

HERSHEY, Pa. (UPI) — Contract talks between the Commonwealth and the striking Pennsylvania Social Workers Union broke off Sunday night when the union rejected a "Final line offer" to end a 13 day walkout which has delayed processing of unemployment compensation checks.

State negotiator William Myers said the offer would average out to an 11 per cent pay hike spread over the next two years. He said that would translate into a wage increase of up to $1,600 a year for most of the union members.

The union challenged the figure, saying the biggest increases would not come until next year. They demanded a six per cent immediate pay hike from the state.

LI. Gov. Ernest Kline, who came to the talks to spell out the new proposal, termed it a "final line offer, the state's best offer, a total and revised Commonwealth offer."

He said the proposal is in the same "fiscal ballpark" as the wage settlement won by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. Kline declined to disclose the terms of the offer.

An earlier proposal called for a 57-cents-an-hour wage hike spread over the next two years.

Apollo astronauts tune up for space link-up mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The Apollo astronauts went jet flying Sunday to polish their skills for linking up in space with two Russian cosmonauts while countdowns on two continents rolled smoothly toward Tuesday's dual launchings.

Apollo commander Thomas P. Stafford called cosmonauts Alexei A. Leonov and Valeri N. Kubasov at the Soviet's Baikonur launch site 8,670 miles away and said, "We will see you in a couple of days."

If all goes well, that will be on Thursday 136 miles over Germany, when the Apollo and Soyuz spacecraft rendezvous, dock nose-to-nose and Stafford and Leonov shake hands.

Stafford, 44-year-old brigadier general making his fourth leap into space, told the cosmonauts that "everything looks good" for launch at the Kennedy Space Center. The cosmonauts said that everything at their end was "real fine."

Chester M. Lee, program director for the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project, spent two and three-quarter hours reviewing all aspects of the mission, including readying of the spacecraft and booster, the close medical watch of the astronauts, preparations of the tracking and recovery network and the weather.

"We are satisfied we are ready to carry out our part of the ASTP mission," Lee said after the session.

A Soviet spokesman said in a news briefing from Moscow that progress toward the Russian launch was going

"strictly according to schedule." He said the prime space vehicle of two the Russians are preparing was ready for fueling and that the cosmonauts were spending their time studying orbital experiments, exercising and resting.

House on the hill, part of the original Penn grant to the Van Vliets

History not limited to main streets

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a weekly series by Bobby Westbrook on some of the historic places in this area, the people who build them and how the years have changed them in a countdown through 1975 toward the Bicentennial year of 1776.)

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
EAST STROUDSBURG — Not all of the historic homes in Monroe County stand on main streets or public thoroughfares. One in particular is so secluded that even the Indians who used to camp in its meadow might find it hard to find these days.

Tucked behind the industrial complex of Stokes Avenue, East Stroudsburg R.D. 2, and in a cul-de-sac beyond the new Bell Telephone buildings, is the Van Vliet homestead. In this oasis the sound of train whistles and heavy traffic might seem echoes from another world.

The foundations of its barn at the entrance of the lane are hidden in a tangle of undergrowth, with trees growing from the ruins. The former horse barn across the lane has been converted into a home. The house itself turns its back on the lane.

The stone portion which dates back at least to 1799 when the first Van Vliet child was born there is hidden by shrubbery, ivy and the bulk of the frame portion which was added a mere hundred years ago.

But the view from the small windows, dwarfed by their two-foot wide sills, is still the same, overlooking the steep slope down to Sambo Creek. In winter, the view expands across the Sambo into what was always called The Meadow.

For the past 10 years, it has been the property of William J. and Pauline Marsh Straub. Their four sons have discovered the "secret room" in the old cellar, with no entrance except between the rafters, which they peopled with runaway slaves from which it was conjectured that Sambo Creek took its name.

However, according to the Van Vliet legends, Sambo Creek took its name from Chief Sambo who with his small band of wandering Indians used to camp on the nearby meadow, accepting handouts of food, a far different picture than of marauding savages of an earlier era.

Actually the house must originally have seemed even more remote than it does now. The lane which once led to it from Beakleyville Chapel is now deep with ruts and practically impassable.

The first Van Vliet came to the Minisink from Holland by way of Esopus, Derrick, or Dirck. Van Vliet was born in Holland in 1699 and came to Esopus with his brother Jan in 1728. As early as 1734, Dirck had traveled down past the Old Mine Hole by way of the Old Mine Road to Delaware Water Gap where he located at the "Rock Rift in Minisink Country."

Oil prices argued

Nader, oil official debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major oil company executive Sunday called President Ford's proposal to end price controls on domestic oil sensible, and said it is needed to protect against the likelihood of another Arab oil embargo.

But consumer advocate Ralph Nader disagreed and said the oil industry is "on the dole" and they operate in international partnerships "with Washington working for them as an accounts receivable."

The two agreed on nothing during an appearance on ABC's Issues and Answers.

John Swearingen, chairman of the board of Standard Oil of Indiana, said, "In the long run the only thing we can do or should do is eliminate price controls on oil just as we have on everything else in this country."

He said Ford's program, announced at a Chicago news conference Saturday, is a "sensible program because the public will not understand or would not accept an immediate price increase of the amount that would accompany complete decontrol."

Nader said decontrol will cost the American family an average of $900 a year in higher costs for energy and products in which energy plays a major production and transportation role.

The "real issue," Nader said, "is are we going to have Washington stabilize prices in this country to keep the economy from going off the brink ... or are we gonna have the OPEC cartel, which works in favor of the oil companies, set the price." OPEC is the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Swearingen said Nader's figures are "absolutely false."

"You're trying to scare the public by having a figure of $900. It's completely erroneous," said Swearingen, who noted a Federal Energy Administration estimate of $121 a family.

The executive said, "There will have to be a price increase" as an incentive to conserve energy. "If you don't do that you're going to have a big police system in this country ... making sure people comply with the regulations."

"If we don't do something about increasing our own supplies why we're going to be in even worse shape in the 1980s and the 'likelihood of embargo is increasing.'"

"No it is not," Nader retorted. "First of all they need us more than we need them."

Cities losing appeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since 1970 the American people have reversed their decades-long trek to the cities and have begun moving back to rural areas, according to a government population study released Sunday.

"This is the first period in this century in which nonmetro areas have grown at a faster rate than metro areas," said Calvin L. Beale, the study's author. Beale is the head of population studies for the Agriculture Department.

His analysis of census data showed that from 1970 to 1973 metropolitan counties grew 2.9 per cent and nonmetro counties swelled by 4.2 per cent. Metro counties are those containing cities of 50,000 people and up plus their neighboring commuter areas.

During the 1960s the metro counties had gained 6 million people while the nonmetro counties lost 3 million residents.

Beale said there were many reasons for the dramatic turnaround in the population pattern ranging from racial disorders and crime in the cities to the environmental movement's idealization of rural ways.

But he laid most of the emphasis on the growth of retirement towns and state colleges in rural areas, the decentralization of manufacturing and the boom in recreational centers focusing on ski slopes and reservoirs.

He also noted the narrowing of differences in rural-urban living conditions, the interstate highway system, the youth revolution's antisuburban attitudes and a growing sensitivity to urban problems of crime, pollution and social alienation.

Beale emphasized that the new population pattern was not the result of urban sprawl pushing the suburbs into what were once farming communities.

Descendant still has deed to original Van Vliet land

In 1741, he returned to Esopus to marry Rachel Van Kuren. They and their 12 children lived in a log house in Stroudsburg until Dirck's death in 1774.

Dirck's son, Charrick, who married Barbara LaBar, was the one who bought the Beakleyville land in a grant from John and Richard Penn. The original deed is still in the possession of a descendant, Leslie "Ted" Van Vliet, Bryant Street, Stroudsburg.

Describing the land as "part of the Penn Manor called Guinea," it included 199 acres and 110 perches and was bought for the sum of $599.06. The Penns had surveyed the land in 1739 and divided it into manors of 1,500 acres each, to each of which they gave a distinguishing name. This grant was part of that "manor called Guinea."

In a deed, dated 1803, adjoining land was described as belonging to Jacob Stroud, Jabez Posten, Michael Ransberry and Thomas Dyer.

The Van Vliets alternated generations in naming sons Derrick and Charrick with varying spelling to the confusion of future historians. Charrick I bought the land but left the building to his son, Derrick or Dirck II. This Derrick was born in 1776 and married Rachel Staples.

They had eight children, all of whom were born in the stone house he had built. Since the oldest, Merion or Marya, was born in 1799, the date of the house is pretty well established.

It was a bank house, built back against the curve of the hill, of rough stone with a large chimney at one end and a smaller chimney at the other. The large chimney served three banks of great fireplaces, one in the cellar kitchen, one on the main floor and one in the loft overhead whose sloping roofline makes the windows seem even smaller.

Life was not without its hazards for Dirck and his wife and their eight children in the small house. There was, for instance, the time the barn burned down. One of their descendants, Anita Van Vliet Breitwieser, of Analomink St., East Stroudsburg, has in her possession the original of a letter written by Daniel Stroud on that occasion. With the original spelling and punctuation it is as follows:

"Stroudsburg
25th of 2nd month, 1821"

"Friend Dirck Van Vliet:

"In consequence of the great loss in the consumption by fire of thy barn and crops, I hope thou wilt accept of a Ton of Hay — I would cheefully send it, but our preparation for building make so much work for our teams that it will be injurious to spare ours to hall it — I wish thee to send as soon as thou can, before the roads get bad — If I am not at home when thy team comes, my son, James, who is at school with thy sons, will shew the hay."

"I feel very sorry for thy loss and am a sincere friend! and well wisher of thee and thy family."

"Dan'l Stroud".

The letter is written on a single sheet of paper, folded to form an envelope and addressed simply, "Dirck Van Vliet, Stroud Township" and was apparently delivered by hand.

Evidently Dirck Van Vliet recovered from this loss and prospered in other ways. At his death in 1834, he not only divided the original 199 acres of the grant but also 60 acres of woodland at the west side of Brodheads Creek and 50 acres on the west side between his two sons Charrick and Richard. His daughters got bequests of money.

Charrick got two thirds of the land, including the old stone house, described as "the farm on which I now live." Charrick was born in 1806. In 1831, he married Hannah Barry of Hamilton Twp.

His father died three years later, so they moved into the old stone house. They had seven children, the oldest of whom, Sarah Jane, was only 14 when their father died.

Before his death, Charrick had given the land for the Beakleyville Chapel, and he was the first person to be buried in its hilltop cemetery.

His widow is another of those women who keep cropping up in a history largely devoted to male descendants who nevertheless made their own way in the world. Hannah Barry Van Vliet is the reason why so many generations of her descendants have referred to the old house on the hill as "Grandmother Hannah's house".

To tell why will take another chapter.

Misuse of public funds charged

Fed's expenditures questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee staff reported Sunday the Federal Reserve System last year spent $4,749 on Christmas decorations at its New York bank, $14,000 to transfer an employee from Miami to Atlanta and $10,074 to pay one of its former officers as a consultant.

Overall, the report said, the Fed's operating expenditures nearly tripled from $197 million to $590 million in the past 10 years, with salaries for officers rising 148 per cent.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., said it reveals "a classic case of misuse of public funds by a government agency."

The expenditures were listed in a 72-page report based on information provided by the Fed at the request of the House banking subcommittee on domestic monetary policy, which Patman chairs.

Patman, a long-time critic of the Fed, issued the report to spur support for his bill calling for an audit of the Fed's operations by the General Accounting Office, a congressional investigative agency. The Fed opposes an audit, arguing it would interfere with its independence.

The Fed does not depend on congressional appropriations for its revenues but uses interest earned by U.S. Treasury notes and bonds it holds. What is left after expenses are subtracted is returned to the Treasury.

"It is now clear that a full-scale audit of the entire Federal Reserve System will reveal millions of dollars of outright waste, inefficiency and costly management practices," Patman said, noting that he sent a copy of the report to Attorney General Edward H.

Levi to see if money spent by the Fed above that necessary to run the nation's banking system can be recovered.

A Fed spokesman declined to discuss the report. "Those are Mr. Patman's charges and we would not comment on them," he said.

The report said the Fed's own records show that in 1974: — $13,969 was spent to transfer employee Ralph Evans from Miami to the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta, including $7,931 for expenses in selling his home.

— $94,000 was spent for "employee recognition." That included $2,883 for employee birthday luncheons at the St. Louis bank, $402.25 for watches for six 25-year employees at the Atlanta bank and $339 for 110 gift paperweights in Houston.

— The New York bank spent $4,749 for Christmas decorations.

Gandhi's appeal goes before court

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The Indian Supreme Court today begins hearing Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's appeal of her lower court conviction of corrupt practices in the 1971 parliamentary elections.

The lower court verdict June 12 took away Mrs. Gandhi's right to vote as a member of parliament and barred her from seeking legislative reelection for six years.

The conviction provoked a storm of demands for her resignation and on June 26 the embattled prime minister proclaimed a national state of emergency. Under it, thousands of opposition Indians have been arrested and strict press censorship has been imposed.

The Supreme Court's proceedings will be open to the press but the Indian government sent out "guidelines" Saturday to newsmen instructing them to clear their dispatches through censors before publication.

This is the first time that the proceedings of a court of law will be subject to censorship in India's 28 years of independence.

The Supreme Court will fix a date for hearing detailed arguments by attorneys for Mrs. Gandhi and for Raj Narain, the Socialist leader who challenged her 1971 election in the lower court and won.

Freed U.S. soldier thanks 'whole world'

BEIRUT (UPI) — American Army Col. Ernest R. Morgan, free after 13 days imprisonment by Palestinian guerrillas, said thanks to "the whole world" Sunday and flew to Ankara, Turkey to rejoin his family.

Morgan left the American University of Beirut hospital, where he had spent the night undergoing checkups, and went directly to the airport where a military plane flew him back to his base in Ankara.

In a brief statement to newsmen before his departure from the hospital, Morgan said the appeals by fellow American blacks for his freedom helped convince his kidnapers to release him.

"Many groups made appeals and this had a profound effect on the people who were controlling me," he said. "Public opinion did a lot to help, I think."

"Now I shall return to my wife and family in Ankara, and I hope, to some semblance of normality."

"I wish to express my sincere gratitude to all the people in the world for their prayers. All's well that ends well," he said.

No questions were allowed following the brief statement, and the colonel, dressed in civilian clothes, left immediately afterwards for the airport.

Morgan was taken to the hospital immediately after guerrillas freed him Saturday on the doorstep of Premier Rashid Karami, three hours before an execution deadline.

What next?

BROCKTON, Mass. — What is believed to be the first prostitution suit ever brought against a man in Massachusetts goes to trial this week. Fred Doane, 31, whose trial was to begin Wednesday, was charged under a law prohibiting a female for offering her body "for indiscriminate sexual intercourse with men for hire." His attorney, P.J. Piscitelli, says the case against his client is absurd. "By definition," he said, "a prostitute is a woman. All the statutes speak of are women ... Have you ever heard of a male prostitute? Prostitution is strictly a female affair." However, Brockton police Lieutenant John Bukunt said, "That's his interpretation. Another interpretation will come Wednesday. Let the court decide it."

More Kennedy problems

WOODSTOCK, Va. — A July 25 court appearance has been set in Shenandoah County for David Kennedy, 20, son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, following his arrest Saturday night on a reckless driving charge. Kennedy may waive the appearance in Shenandoah County General District Court if he chooses to pay a fine, State Police said Sunday. The fine has not yet been determined by the judge. State Trooper J.R. Heltzel, the arresting officer, said he clocked Kennedy, who was alone in a 1974 Toyota, at 92 m.p.h. in a 55-m.p.h. zone.

Credit info decision

CONCORD, N.H. — A possible national landmark decision on conditions to be met before credit files on individuals can be sold is expected to come sometime this summer from the New Hampshire Supreme Court, according to state Attorney General Warren Rudman. Rudman said Sunday the high court recently heard arguments on an injunction to prevent the Credit Bureau of Nashua, Inc., from selling its files on individuals to the individuals themselves or in bulk to other agencies. The incident began when Wesley Pike, president of the Nashua credit firm, allegedly mailed letters May 31 to nearly 60,000 residents in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, offering to sell them their own credit files for $7.50. The letter allegedly implied if the files were not purchased, they would become "part of a large computerized data bank."

Israelis stage attack

TEL AVIV — Israeli warplanes struck into south Lebanon for the second time in a week Sunday, attacking Palestinian targets near the port of Sidon and sending billowing black clouds of smoke into the sky. Palestinian sources in Beirut said four persons, including a woman, were killed and 20 others wounded in the attack on the Ain El Helweh camp. Arab forces in Lebanon retaliated later in the night by firing rockets at the Israeli border town of Nahariyah at about 8 p.m., wounding two persons, Israeli sources said.

Student's release expected

PALO ALTO, Calif. — Three young women released from captivity by Marxist guerrillas in Zaire said Sunday the remaining prisoner, a recent Stanford University graduate, will be released soon. A Stanford spokesman said the women reported that U.S. officials in Tanzania received a letter from the student, Stephen Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., in which he said he was well and was confident of being set free. The four students were kidnaped May 19 from a Tanzanian wildlife research center run by Stanford.

Japanese boat seized

PORTSMOUTH, Va. — A Japanese ship suspected of illegal fishing was impounded here Sunday after its capture in international waters by the Coast Guard off Cape Henry. Coast Guard spokesman John Fishburn said the 183-foot Daishun Muru was moored at the Coast Guard Support Center here at 9:18 a.m. He said it was captured within the 200-mile limit, 90 miles northeast of Cape Henry, by the cutter Alert. The Alert, whose home port is Cape May, N.J., seized the ship for a possible violation of the U.S. Continental Shelf Fishing Resources Law after a routine boarding party inspected its cargo, he said.

Weather turns nasty for East Coast folks

By United Press International

Heavy thunderstorms pounded the East Coast Sunday, flooding streams and roads and prompting flash flood warnings in several Middle Atlantic states. Other showers dotted the Midwest.

A stationary front extending from Maine to Florida caused the storms along the coast, dumping an additional one to two inches of rain from the mid-Atlantic coast into North Carolina.

A flash flood watch was issued for Delaware. Authorities reported serious highway and street flooding throughout the state. The Delaware River had risen at least four feet since midnight Saturday.

Three houses in Camden, Del., collapsed due to heavy rain, but there were no injuries. One furniture warehouse in Wyoming, Del., was under several feet of water.

Heavy rains also produced standing water in Maryland, but no traffic tie-ups were reported, despite a flash flood warning in effect for Baltimore and nine counties.

Flash flood watches were also in effect through the afternoon in southeastern New York state, southern New Jersey and southeast Pennsylvania.

A small tornado made a brief touch down in Lenox and Dalton, Mass., taking a few barn roofs and cutting off the tops of trees.

"Patio furniture got in the path of the tornado and people still haven't found their stuff yet," a Dalton police officer said. "It took a few trees, a few barns and shut off the power for about an hour."

High winds and heavy rains caused power outages and pockets of damage in the Litchfield County and Bethany Prospect areas of Connecticut.

In Seabrook, N.J., a strong gust of wind, believed to be a tornado heavily damaged a meat processing plant and an elementary school. It cut off electricity to parts of the community of 1,000 when it tore down utility poles.

BRODHEADSVILLE — More than 300 residents, many of them members of local churches, have reached out their hearts to native Cree Indians living 1,000 miles north of here on more than 2,000 isolated Canadian reservations during the last two months.

Bibles, Bibles and more Bibles, both used and new ones, have been donated for a new missionary outreach into the Canadian bush country.

In addition, $55 has been donated to purchase for the Cree New Testaments and everything from vegetable seeds to a dictionary and much needed Christian literature has been collected for the Rev. Ross Maracle, a Mohawk Indian who has committed himself to bringing the Gospel to his Indian brothers in Canada.

Nearly 400 Bibles have poured in from all sections of Monroe County and the Slate Belt since I made an appeal for used Bibles two months ago. My car is nearly filled from top to bottom with the Bibles, and this weekend, I will be taking the donations to Rev. Maracle at the missionary outreach station in Deseranto, Ont.

So many residents have been involved in the project and so many are interested to know more about the Cree and their life style, I decided to devote a little of this column to them.

Many of the Cree live in isolated villages in Canada where the temperatures plummet to 20 degrees below zero, and at the present time, according to Rev. Maracle, there are potential Wounded Knee explosions about to erupt all over Canada. The situation there is one in which the government is taking away the hunting areas the Cree depend on for their livelihood and reservation life is one of poverty for the Indians.

Many of the young men in the Cree tribes at the present time are taking war purification rights and vow to fight against the Canadian government in the near future. Rev. Maracle feels that Jesus Christ may be the only thing that can stop these potential uprisings.

Many of the Canadian Cree have never seen a white man and have never heard the Gospel preached at all — the only way to reach many of them is by canoe or snowmobile, depending on what time of year it is. Using either means of transportation means several days' journey through rough bush country.

The Indian couples, with their average 10 to 12 children, keep warm with animal skins, western style clothes, and an open fire in a one-room, make-shift tent they construct in their three-to four-month trapping expeditions.

When residing in the village on the reservations, the Indians live in a one-room house covered with a canvas roof. The average size home is 18 feet by 26 feet and contains no running water or heat, other than from the pot-belly stove.

Ice must be cut from the river during the winter to provide drinking water for families. The Canadian government does provide free schooling for many of the children, who jump on a huge sled mounted on the back of a snowmobile to go to school. This is the Cree's version of a school bus.

In the last year alone, in the Village of Moose Factory, which is about 800 miles north of Montreal, 25 per cent of the 1,000 Cree there have been converted to Christianity after hearing the Gospel preached.

In the neighboring village of Ruppert's House, two years ago 75 cases of liquor were shipped in by plane each week for the Indians. Now 30 per cent of the village has turned to Christianity and only a half case of liquor a week is delivered to the tiny outpost.

Because of the revival that is now going on among the Canadian Indians, there is a hunger to read the Bible, according to Rev. Maracle. Because of the generosity of Monroe Countians, more than 400 Indian families in Canada next week will have that hunger satisfied.

Don't like tax? Appeals possible

PHILADELPHIA — Eastern Pennsylvania taxpayers, who have had their tax returns audited by the Internal Revenue Service, may appeal the auditor's decision if they don't agree with the results.

Because of tax law complexity and its interpretation, people do disagree as to the amount of taxes owed the government. The first appeals step is administrative — a meeting with a district-level conference staff member. The conferee works independently of the tax examiner, although the results could turn out the same.

If the dollar amount in question for one year's tax is $2,500 or less, the conferee has the authority to settle the case after weighing the facts and determining the hazards of litigation. A taxpayer could skip this step and go directly to the next level, the regional Appellate Division, however it is recommended that taxpayers try and resolve differences at the lowest possible IRS level.

The Appellate Division usually gets involved if the taxpayer and district conferee don't agree on the tax liability. This division is organizationally independent from the audit and conference levels. Appellate conferees have authority to settle any case, regardless of the amount of tax liability, again based on the merits of the case and the hazards of litigation.

Taxpayers have the right to be accompanied by an attorney, a certified public accountant or anyone else enrolled to practice before the IRS at these conferences. However, if a representative attends in place of the taxpayer, this individual must have written authorization to do so.

Most differences are settled through these procedures, however a taxpayer who still does not agree, can go to the U.S.

Tax Court, U.S. Court of Claims or the U.S. District Court.

To have a case heard in the tax court, the taxpayer must request the IRS to issue a statutory notice of tax deficiency. The taxpayer has ninety days from the issuance of this letter to file a petition with the tax court to get the case heard.

The court will schedule a trial at a location which is convenient for the taxpayer, who can either represent himself or have professional assistance. If the dispute involves $1,500 or less the case is heard under the small tax case procedure. The commissioners of the small tax division try to help the taxpayer by keeping the hearing as informal as possible.

A decision by the tax court commissioner is not binding as a precedent for other tax years, on other taxpayers, or on the IRS.

No proposed tax deficiency has to be paid until the tax court decides or declines to hear the case. After a decision, there is no further appeal of the tax court commissioner's decision either by the taxpayer or the IRS.

If a taxpayer does not want to follow the small tax case procedure, or if more than $1,500 is involved, then one or more judges of the Tax Court may consider the case. Decisions by the tax court, which meets in 62 cities, may be appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and to the U.S. Supreme Court.

To have a case considered by either the U.S. Court of Claims, or a U.S. District Court, the tax must be paid, then a claim for refund filed within two years with the IRS. If IRS denies the claim or fails to act on it within six months, the taxpayer can file suit in either court.

LEADERSHIP HONORED — Mrs. John W. Sibley, newly-elected president of the Board of Directors of the Burnley Workshop of the Poconos, Inc., reads the inscription on a plaque she is presenting to former board president Walter R. Strunk for his leadership during the last three years. The award was presented during the July 10 board meeting.

Bicen won't be forgotten throughout Pike County

Pike County Bureau
MILFORD — King George of Great Britain kept a diary and under the dateline July 4, 1776 he wrote, "Nothing happened today," according to research from the Pike County Bicentennial Commission.

Apparently, King George was not observant, but Pike County's bicentennial group will not fall into the same trap.

Designated as a national bicentennial community by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA), Pike County has planned several events to celebrate the nation's 200th birthday.

Herbert Moore, Pike's bicentennial chairman, explained most of the events are planned and sponsored by local clubs and civic groups.

The Bicentennial Pike History Committee, for instance, continues to meet regularly to discuss work on significant local history projects.

George J. Fluhr, a committee member, has just issued "Pike County — Highlights of History in Northeastern Pennsylvania." The 14-page booklet outlines more than 100 entries and major events that have occurred in Pike County from before 1600 to the present date. Copies are available for $1 at the Bicentennial Office in Milford, or from Fluhr in Shohola.

For other local history projects, David Kleinstuber, chairman of the history committee, said there is still a need for old account books, product descriptions, advertising brochures, photos, and newspaper accounts of the boarding houses, industries and businesses that flourished in the county in the 19th and 20th centuries.

In addition to the history committee's work, a summer series of lectures on Pocono history will be held at Hemlock Farms, sponsored by the Hemlock Farms Women's Club.

The lecture schedule and topics are: July 25 — "The Battle of the Minisink," Dr. Vernon Leslie; Aug. 8 — "The Amazing Pennsylvania Canals," William H. Shank and Aug. 22 — "Old Tools by an Old Pike Countian" with exhibits by Ross Kleinstuber, and "The Civil War Train Wreck on the Erie" by George J. Fluhr.

Tickets may be obtained at the Hemlock Farms Community Assn. Office. A donation of $5 covers all evenings.

The Milford Garden Club Flower Show, scheduled for Aug. 22-23, will also sport a bicentennial theme "Our Colonial Heritage." Exhibitors will be asked to base their arrangements on themes suggesting aspects of 18th Century society.

Pike County residents will also help celebrate the 1779 Battle of Minisink when American Militiamen tried to prevent the escape of Joseph Brant and his party of Loyalists and Indians who had raided the Mini-sink settlements, now Port Jervis.

Pike County will join Orange, Sullivan and Sussex county organizations in the July 20, 21 and 22 anniversary observances.

In the Milford area, an architectural study committee has been formed with Bob Fish as chairman. The group will work with an architect and record noteworthy features of homes and public buildings. It is hoped the committee will publish an article with pictures about significant buildings.

Community college adds child session

BETHLEHEM — Northampton County Area Community College has announced the addition of an afternoon session in its new Child Development Center, due to be ready by September.

This past year, the college offered an afternoon "Tot Lot" session and a morning Child Development Center. "Tot Lot" refers to the program of hourly day care while the child development program is essentially a regular nursery school.

Carol Jones, recently named head teacher in the Child Development Center, noted that while the morning session in the coming September through May program is filled, openings still exist for the 12:00 noon to 2:30 p.m. afternoon session. The college is currently receiving applications for children who must be from 3 to 5 years old.

The addition of the afternoon session is made possible by the relocation of the Child Development Center to the college's north campus. Previously, both the "Tot Lot" and Child Development Center used the same room on the college's south campus. The new north campus facilities will include separate facilities for each program.

The north campus facilities are financed by additional state reimbursement the college received on the Engineering and Business Technology Center which was a result of a state change in funding procedures regarding capital reimbursement under the terms of the community college act.

Mrs. Jones noted that the "Tot Lot" and Child Development Center each have a limit of 20 children per session.

The Child Development Center is staffed by a head teacher, assistant teacher and students enrolled in the college's Child Care Education program. Information on the CDC and Tot Lot may be obtained by calling the college at 865-5351 ext. 298 or 299.

Church hosts gospel music

GOULDSBORO — Singers from the Olivet Covenant Presbyterian Church of Mt. Vernon will present the gospel in music at 8 p.m. Friday, July 18 in the United Methodist Church of Gouldsboro.

The public is invited to hear the 30 young people in concert free of charge. There will be a time of fellowship at the conclusion of the concert. The singers will spend the night at homes of members of the church.

Tennis courts rejected by DelVal school board

MATAMORAS — There weren't enough votes at the monthly meeting of the Delaware Valley School Board to approve construction of proposed tennis courts for the district.

With three members absent, an administration proposal to accept a bid for the tennis courts contingent upon approval from the Department of Education and the school's authority failed by a vote of 4-2.

Board members Vincent McEvoy and Eugene Garvey voted against the motion that would have allowed the administration to execute a contract by July 25.

Previously, board members had agreed to accept the base bid of $35,752 from Sincro Corp., Allentown and reject all alternate bids.

Board members Hazel Irvine, Michael Palmer, Thomas Hogan and Walter Shannon supported the motion. Absent board members were Kent Ryder, Herman Davis and Patricia Phillips.

The district had planned to use nearly $80,000 in interest left over from the school's building program to construct the tennis courts.

At board meetings, Concerned Taxpayers for Quality Education (CTQE) and individual residents had opposed the expenditure, stating the money could be used to improve curriculum in the district.

In other business, Eugene Garvey, board chairman, appointed a five-member consulting group to examine two proposed building sites in Shohola and Delaware townships.

Garvey, who noted the Shohola site had been criticized strongly by local residents, said the team will evaluate the sites and submit a report to the school board.

Members appointed to the consulting committee were: Warner Depuy, president of the First National Bank of Pike County; Donald Z. Wade, an executive of the Security Bank and Trust Co.; Dean McCombs, a realtor and appraiser; Leo Achterman, a professional engineer and Jerry Slonaker, an architect.

Board members also hired three new teachers: James Fliszar, health and physical education at the elementary level; Robert Whalen, health and physical education at the middle school and Samuel Creyer, art teacher at the elementary level.

Mrs. Eleanor Janieszewski was hired as a part-time teacher aide at the Delaware Township elementary school.

Vector agency needs help

There's nothing to dampen outdoor fun more rapidly than a descending swarm of mosquitoes — unless it is a descending burst of rain.

Yet, while Monroe County spends more and more for personnel, material and equipment for its recreation program, it continues to ignore the needs of its mosquito (and other pest) control agency.

We are not downgrading the importance of outdoor recreational opportunities for county residents. In fact, we have called for more development of such opportunities in the past.

But keeping down the number of mosquitoes in our primarily semi-rural area is pretty important, too. There are some sections of Stroud Township, for example, that simply cannot be used for outdoor barbecues without heavy application of smudge and backyard spraying — and then the application is only good for a few hours.

Vector Control Agent George Fox points out that lack of personnel and equipment has severely limited his ability to cover the county on anything resembling a regular schedule. He reports that he has cleaned out an infested area, only to find yet more mosquitoes when he finally was able to return for follow-up treatment.

One of the reasons for the vector control agency's problems is the lack of support it gets in the chambers of Monroe's county commissioners. We don't mean by the commissioners, but by the residents whose insistence often means the difference between more money for operations and a turn-down of fiscal requests.

The recreation area gets such support from its Recreation and Park Commission — a group of activist citizens that lends a lot of weight to spending requests.

What may be needed is a similar board of residents concerned about the nuisance and health hazard presented by unrestrained breeding of mosquitoes (remember the outbreak of equine encephalitis two years ago?)

It is too much for the county's commissioners to expect one man, one assistant and one truck to be equal to the task of keeping down the mosquito population. More money and more people would help in two ways: The vector control agency could keep up with the worst breeding areas, and an educational program could be set up to show homeowners how to police their own grounds and neighborhoods to prevent mosquito breeding.

Commissioners ought to give that some thought, and also consider adopting a program similar to that of the recreation commission — the hiring of youngsters out of school to do some of the clean-up work that is at the heart of any attempt to control the breeding and growth of mosquitoes and other pests that make life miserable during the summer months.

Decision on Tocks

Now that still another study has been made on the impact of the proposed Tock's Island Dam in the Delaware River Recreation Area it is once again time for a decision on whether to proceed with the dam project.

Every time a final judgment is due it seems either the governors of the states involved or members of Congress request a new study for their guidance.

In 1971, nine years after the project was authorized, regional congressmen insisted upon an environmental report before deciding to move ahead with the construction. As time has passed, the cost of the project has spiraled upward from $235 million to at least $440 million, and possibly more.

The newest study, authorized about a year ago at a cost of $1.1 million, makes no clearcut recommendation, apparently. It simply lists the alternatives open to the decision-makers and the likely result in cost and environmental gain or loss.

For example, in relating that the dam project would increase employment but harm archaeological research, the consultant firms observed that in making a decision "it depends on whether you think a labor leader is more important than an archaeologist."

We have long favored both the recreation area, which is under development and partially complete, and the dam project, believing they will stake out for this and future generations a large recreational area in the shrinking Northeast while at the same time provide for badly needed flood control, water supply and power generation.

Others disagree. But after 13 years of study and debate a final decision should be put off no longer.

Will Korea be next victim of shifting psywar focus?

Jeffrey Hart

ippines are of marginal security importance to the United States." He goes on to argue that the 41,000 U.S. troops stationed in South Korea "could easily be drawn into a war on that peninsula to defend a regime with serious internal weaknesses."

My own antennae have been picking up just those themes with increasing frequency lately — in the media, in conversation with "articulate" types and in the statements of liberal politicians like Rep. Fraser. And my bet is that the decibels are going to increase: 1) the unimportance of South Korea; 2) the undesirability of maintaining U.S. forces there; and 3) the repressiveness of the Park regime.

These are becoming the "liberal" things to say on the matter, more or less as "stop the bombing" — remember? — was the "liberal" thing to say in 1968.

The process by which something becomes the "liberal" thing to say probably cannot be precisely charted, but it certainly would be worth a research grant to find out. Worth noting, however, is the fact that the North Koreans have been waging a vigorous propaganda campaign throughout the world focused on items No. 1 and No. 3, above.

As soon as the U.S. withdrew from Saigon, Premier Kim Il Sung of North Korea flew to China, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Mauritania, and Algeria. That last may have been the most important, since Algeria tends to orchestrate Third World diplomatic activity in the U.N. and elsewhere. (I note that Kim conspicuously omitted Moscow. But, as we see from the Izvestia item, Moscow is already plugged into the campaign.) The Premier will also press his case at the meeting of the Third World foreign ministers scheduled for this August in Lima, Peru.

Additional tactics

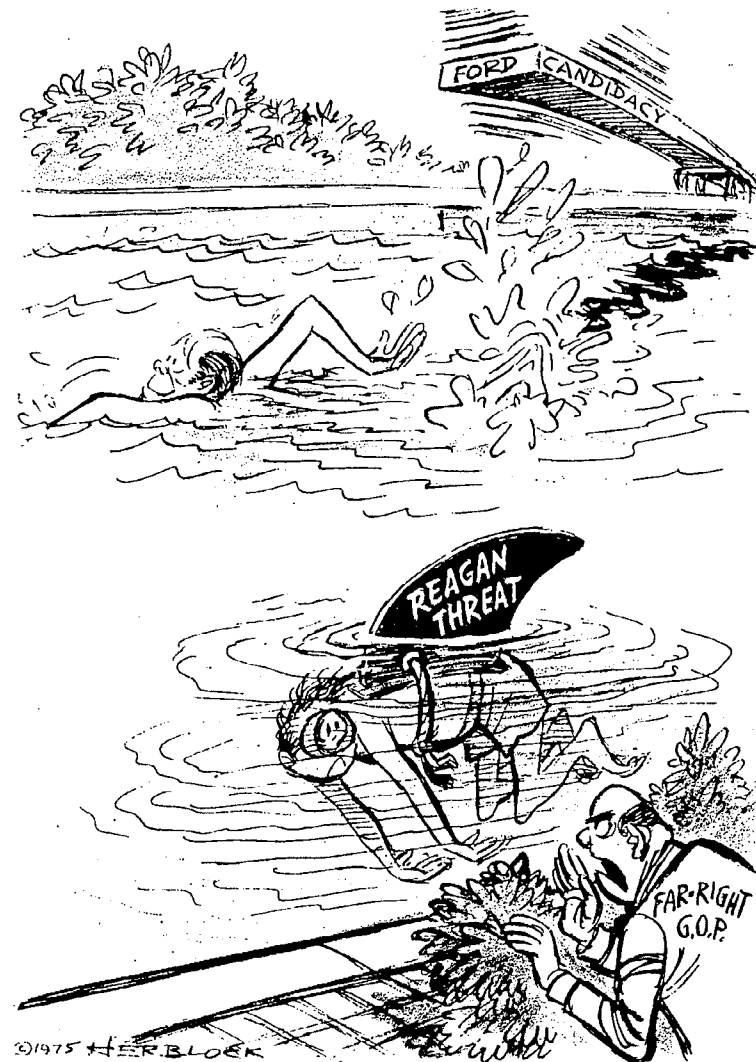

With the diplomatic ball thus set in motion, all sorts of other tactics will come into play, some of them spontaneously, some of them not. International conferences will begin to focus on Korea, trades unions in various countries — some of them under Communist control — will issue statements, the President of Mexico (under pressure from his domestic left) will make statements critical of Seoul, "progressive" journalists will develop the three main themes in various ways, editorials will be written, women's groups will turn to the issue, and someone will win an Academy Award with a film about the horrors of the last Korean War and the iniquity of the South Korean regime.

Assorted Koreans will visit the campuses. The Moscow-Pyongyang position will become, by a process of osmosis, the "enlightened" position to hold. Dissent from it will become, gradually, unfashionable. Alert politicians like Rep. Fraser will find that they can easily gain the applause of the discerning by supporting it.

The game here is a subtle one, and not altogether unlike the game just played to conclusion in Vietnam. The North Koreans probably do not dare to mount a full-scale attack on the South. The game, therefore, is to erode the political support provided by the South's main sponsor, the U.S., as a prelude to either a political or military victory later on.

In the world of actuality, in contract to the world of Rep. Fraser, South Korea is quite important. It is very close to Japan, and both the Japanese and the U.S. have heavy investments there. It is part of a northeast Asia defense line with important posts in Japan, Taiwan, and South Korea. It has a formal treaty with the U.S. It is obviously being set up as the next U.S. humiliation.

'Pst! Splash around a little — I don't know if he saw you'

Russia's Patrick Henry

Roscoe Drummond

WASHINGTON — Anyone fortunate enough to hear Alexander Solzhenitsyn's stirring, challenging and revealing speech in Washington can understand why the Soviet Union felt it had to get him out of Russia. He was too prominent to be killed. He was too brave to be silenced. He knew too much about unending Soviet repression to be allowed to remain in his own country. Solzhenitsyn towered above his words but his words were so burning, so uncompromising that, as one colleague put it, "normal mortals blushed and drew back."

He talked for 125 minutes from notes without a written manuscript, and it was a thundering appeal to the West to end a policy of retreat in the face of Moscow's unchanged goal of dominating as much of the world as others will give up. Here are some of the things he said with such force that his audience, unused to such power of the word, greeted him alternately with stunned silence or ecstatic cheers.

ON FIRMNESS IN THE RIGHT — "The very ideology of communism, all of Lenin's teachings are that anyone is considered to be a fool who doesn't take what's lying in front of him. They say: If you can take it, take it. If you can attack, attack. But if there's a wall, then go back!"

"The Communist leaders respect only firmness and have contempt and laugh at persons who continually give in to them. Your leaders say: 'Power, without any attempt to conciliation, will lead to a world conflict.' But I would say that power with continual subservience is no power at all."

"Look at little Finland in 1939 which by its own forces withstood the attack. You in 1948 defended Berlin only by your firmness of spirit, and there was no world conflict. In Korea in 1950 you stood up against the Communists only by your firmness, and there was no world conflict. In 1962 you compelled the rockets to be removed from Cuba. Again, it was only firmness, and there was no world conflict."

ON SOVIET REPRESSION — "Here are the figures on executions without trial: under the czars — 17 a year; at the height of the Spanish Inquisition — 10 a month. During the first two years of Lenin's reign — more than 1,000 a month; during Stalin — 40,000 a month."

ON SOVIET JUSTICE TODAY: AN EXAMPLE — "One Soviet citizen was in the United States and on his return he said that in the United States they have wonderful automobile roads. The KGB arrested him and demanded a term of 10 years. The judge said: 'I don't object, but there is not enough evidence. Couldn't you find something else against him?' So the judge was exiled to Siberia for 10 years and they gave the other man 10 years."

IS COMMUNISM CHANGING? — "Some say the Soviet leaders have now given up their inhuman ideology. Not at all. They haven't given it up one bit. Soviet engineers determine the fate of the economy just as much as our generals determine the fate of the army. That means zero. That's our system. Judge it for yourself."

Partial extracts, though informative, cannot possibly do justice to Solzhenitsyn's delivered speech. It needs to be read. You can obtain a copy by writing to AFL-CIO Headquarters, 815 16th St. N.W., Washington, D. C.

Marcos ups bribe to silence congressional witness

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

Minn., who presided over the House hearings, has also urged the Justice Department to conduct a full inquiry.

Unaware that Mijares was cooperating with the FBI, Alconcel got in touch with him again and doubled the offer. Alconcel made it quite clear he was speaking for Marcos.

To establish the connection, Mijares, an ex-newspaperman, called Marcos' office and spoke with his top aide-de-camp, Dr. Guillermo de Vega. The aide, according to Mijares, verified the $100,000 offer.

To establish our own verification, we retained crack San Francisco lawyer Sheldon Greene to listen, with Mijares' permission, to a second phone conversation with Manila. The aide, de Vega, reaffirmed in English and Tagalog his offer to "help" Mijares and didn't question Mijares' references to the $100,000 bribe.

Mijares asked, as bait, whether Marcos would go as high as $250,000. This would have to be approved, said de Vega, by Marcos personally.

Acquaintances of Alconcel in San Francisco to tell us Marcos is trying to persuade him to take the rap for the bribe, leave the United States and accept a minor ambassadorship. We haven't been able to reach Alconcel for comment.

Ford Favored: Las Vegas oddsmaker Jimmy the Greek Snyder, who calculates the political odds exclusively for us, gives Ronald Reagan only one chance in 20 of taking the Republican presidential nomination away from President Ford.

But the former California governor has one chance in four of stealing the vice presidential nomination from Nelson Rockefeller.

As the Greek assesses the situation, Alabama's Governor George Wallace might break with the Democrats and run again as a third-party candidate for the White House. He would be likely to draw conservative voters away from President Ford, just as he hurt Richard Nixon more than Hubert Humphrey in the 1968 presidential election.

Under these circumstances, the Greek foresees a definite possibility that the GOP convention, in a move to give the ticket a stronger conservative coloration, might nominate Reagan to be Ford's running mate.

Ford is also a clear favorite over all the leading Democratic contenders. The President has the common touch. His favorite line is that he is "a Ford, not a Lincoln." He talks about his fondness for the late Harry Truman, another President in the image of the common man. Ford also has an easy, affable Eisenhower quality that the people instinctively like.

For these reasons, according to the Greek, Ford will be hard to beat in 1976.

Suspicious Sheep: Some environmental wolves in sheep's clothing have suddenly shown up in Washington. In the name of the environment, they are bleating against measures that would interfere with profits and jobs.

While true environmentalists are lucky to get the ear of the White House gardener, these heavily funded, labor-industry lobbyists have been promised a conference with President Ford's top ecology advisors.

The lobbyists have formed several groups. A typical one calls itself the Environmental Balance Association and claims to take a balanced view of the environmental issue.

But Ralph Nader told us that the talk of "balance" is really "a semantic figleaf to camouflage a deliberate rape of our environment."

Our own investigation largely supports Nader's charge. Despite their professed concern for the environment, these lobbyists get their backing from banks, construction firms, agribusiness and companies with major pollution records, plus some unions.

(First of seven columns)

The year is racing on and you now have only 170 days left in which to take tax strategy steps that will slash both your 1975 and your 1976 federal income taxes to a minimum.

For the first time, I'm submitting this guaranteed moneysaving and heartbreak-preventing series in midyear rather than in fall. The key reason is that the "firecracker" tax law we already have received and the probability of another tax law before year end make advance tax planning far more complex than in previous years. A second reason is that you have urged me to speed up the moneysaving tips so you would have more time to act.

As an illustration of the basic point that the time to cut your '75 taxes is before New Year's — not next April 15 — consider the one-shot $30 credit for every person you claim as a personal exemption given to you by the 1975 tax law.

Each $1 of credit cuts $1 off your 1975 tax bill and this credit is for 1975 only. Thus, it is vital for you to get every single dependency exemption you're entitled to this year.

It is even more important that you don't lose out on the $750 deduction, plus the $30 credit because you fall a few dollars short of support of your dependent in 1975.

The new percentage standard deduction as of now also is only for '75; it rises from 15 to 16 per cent of your adjusted gross income — to a maximum of $2,600 for married couples filing jointly and a maximum of $2,300 for single taxpayers.

Then there are the new withholding tables for 1975 which became effective May 1 and which end on Jan. 1, 1976. While this basically means that taxpayers the nation over are now getting more take-home pay than at the start of the year, it creates other problems that could result in your PAYING MORE, NOT LESS tax for '75.

Taxpayers who are unwary will find themselves in danger of being underwithheld. If you don't wake up to this danger before 1975 ends, you well may have to pay a lump sum of cash to settle your account with the Treasury when you file next spring.

The explanation: the tax rates have not changed. All that has changed is a higher standard deduction and a new credit built into the tax tables. You may be able to take advantage of only one — the $30 per person tax credit. As a result, you could be so underwithheld you would be forced to pay a hefty balance next April 15.

Likely candidates

Here are two likely candidates for underwithholding, according to Prentice-Hall:

(1) Suppose you itemize your deductions — and claim an additional withholding allowance. Your problem: your withholding is down in '75, but your tax liability isn't except for the $30 per person credit.

You might be better off increasing the amount withheld, which you can do by not claiming the extra allowance in 1975. You should change your Form W-4, the withholding form.

(2) You earn outside income but don't pay any estimated tax. Until now, withholding has covered 80 per cent or more of your tax liability — and where at least 80 per cent is covered, all you have to do is pay the balance with your return.

But your problem is that the new withholding rates may drop your withholding below the 80 per cent level — and if that happens, not only will you have to come up with more cash to settle your debt next year, but you'll also be hit with a penalty tax for underpaying your estimated tax. Lower withholding could cost you money. So, urges Prentice-Hall, take a new look at your withholding allowances. It might be wise strategy for you to claim only three dependents for the rest of the year, if you are now claiming four — and thereby increase your withholding.

The vital advice now: stay out of the underwithholding trap! You can in coming months work out simple arrangements to increase the money withheld and thereby to solve your dual problems of being underwithheld and underpaying your estimated tax.

Tuesday: Your dependency deduction.

By ALAN GOULD JR.

The Record had a rare case a couple of weeks ago. We deliberately kept a story out of the newspaper.

A woman called to admit she had an accident the previous evening. "There must be a way it can be kept out of the paper," she said.

Up till that point she was average; similar to the 15 or 20 calls we get each year from people who have become involved in a news story and fear the embarrassment that will be added by publication.

Reporters who handle the stories are never to make such a decision although they know the answer. They turn the person over to the editor or publisher who tries to be as reasonable as possible to the distraught caller but always ends up with the same response: "Sorry, but we must run the story. We have a reputation of our own to protect."

There is an exception. When the health of a "third person" could be put in serious jeopardy by publication we may at least delay it.

This was the case. The truck which had been damaged was a new one belonging to the woman's husband. The husband was in Monroe General recuperating from a week-old heart attack. "He reads the paper every day. If he sees the story of the accident he'll blow up. He's that kind of man. I'm afraid he'll have another heart attack," she claimed.

That put her in the top 50 per cent. About half the people who request (or demand) that a story be left out have a story of their own that seems to prove their true concern is for others who might innocently be hurt.

On this list are the husbands (or wives) who have been involved in an accident while out with someone else's husband (or wife). The "marriage" will be shattered, the children will be shocked, friends alienated.

Much of what is claimed could be true but left unsaid at the newspaper's end of the conversation is perhaps that it would be best in the long run for the cards to be on the table. It wasn't after all, the accident that was wrong.

Verification of claims is necessary. When it becomes time for The Record to ask for the doctor's name in order to check the dire consequences envisioned, the caller usually backs off. In our most recent case, the woman was eager to help.

So the doctor was called at the hospital and the story literally confirmed.

"This is a vigorous man having a hard time accepting the fact that he had a heart attack nine days ago," said the doctor. "I've talked with his wife. My suggestion is that she arrange all the details on the insurance and repairs so that we have all the answers before confronting him with the accident. A few days should do it."

Why not? So that's as it was left — out of The Record.

This has happened only one other time in the last 10 years that I know of.

A youngster was hit by a car; leg broken with internal injuries. In the same hospital was her grandfather to whom the youngster was very close. The elderly man had a bad heart condition. He read the paper as a ritual every day.

This was an accident many knew about, an ambulance had been called to a populated neighborhood. Obviously we don't like to deny readers news we can get and we had the story.

Could the paper be clipped or misplaced that day? Perhaps some subterfuge could have been arranged but the simplest thing was to delay the story until a time could be found to tell the man.

So we skipped the story for a day. But as will happen the word spread without the story and one of his visitors expressed sympathy to him about his grandchild hospitalized on another floor.

He didn't have a fatal relapse, fortunately, but not publishing the story had served no purpose.

Usually no matter what the circumstances it is best to have any story published with the facts on the line. Word spreads one way or another to those most concerned. And as "word" spreads it is often altered and exaggerated.

Our principle is that you join us in wanting a community in which the newspaper (though it may miss a story now and then) will not be intimidated nor play favorites. That it will print all the news as honestly as it knows how.

Congressional roll call

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In key roll call votes last week, the House rejected an attempt to prohibit supersonic aircraft from landing at U.S. airports.

The House also voted to set up a series of national petroleum reserves around the country as a safeguard against another oil embargo.

The Senate continued to debate the disputed New Hampshire senatorial election, failing for a fifth time to cut off debate. An extension of the national school lunch program was approved by the Senate.

The House:

— An amendment that sought to prohibit supersonic aircraft which exceed certain noise standards from landing at U.S. airports, defeated 196-214.

Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, no; Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15, yes.

— A bill authorizing the secretary of interior to establish national petroleum reserves, to be regulated in a manner consistent with the nation's total energy needs, passed 391-20: McDade, yes; Rooney, yes.

The Senate:

— A fifth motion to end debate on the New Hampshire senatorial dispute, 60 votes needed to invoke closure, failed 57-38:

Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., no; Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., no.

— A bill extending the school lunch and nutrition acts, passed 81-8:

Scott, yes; Schweiker, yes.

— An amendment that sought to raise by 25 per cent the eligibility level for reduced price lunches, defeated 29-61: Scott, no; Schweiker, yes.

Meals can be made ahead

By BARBARA GIBBONS

The cool, cool, cool of the evening — or first thing tomorrow morning — is the best time to make tomorrow night's dinner.

Make-ahead is a great idea for summer cooks . . . avoids slaving over a hot stove during the day's peak heat period. For work-all-day cooks, do-ahead is often the only answer.

Round steak manana

- 1 pound round steak or beef arm steak, trimmed of fat
 - 1 tablespoon diet margarine
 - 1 cup tomato juice
 - 3 tablespoons dry white wine
 - 1 beef bouillon cube
 - 2 onions, sliced
 - 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms
 - 1 cup evaporated skim milk
 - 2 tablespoons flour
 - salt and pepper
- Cut beef into 2-inch strips and coat lightly with mustard. Heat diet margarine in non-stick skillet. Add beef and brown lightly over moderate heat, stirring to brown evenly. Add tomato juice, wine, bouillon cube and onions. Cover and simmer over very low heat about 30 minutes. Cool skillet and refrigerate, covered.

BEFORE DINNER: Remove from refrigerator and lift off hardened fat. Add canned mushrooms, including liquid, and reheat to boiling. Simmer.

STOMACH AILMENTS

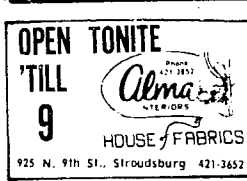

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, D.C.

Stomach Ailments include a wide variety — vomiting, headache, burning pains, dizziness, bloating, constipation, etc. All stomach-control by nerve impulses exist it may be because of nerve impulses inference. The chiropractor locates the point and finds in the spine where nerve impulses interference exists. This is due to misaligned vertebrae, and through proper adjustment by hand, to restore the misaligned vertebrae to its normal position.

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — Connecticut ex-Gov. and diplomat John Lodge returns to acting for the first time in decades — he'll play a Grandee in Fellini's "Casanova" — in a nude scene yet! (Not John nude; a girl). His salary, a simple expense account—$2,000. . . . The Ralph Bellamys are looking at Fla. homes. Can't stand the L.A. smog, hate the cold and would be a jet-hop from any role that strikes Ralph's movies' and oil-rich fancy. . . . The Mike Nichols' divorce quietly formalized itself earlier this year. Ex-wife Margot collected heady alimony-child support. . . . Mike never camouflaged the size or extent of his fortune, quite the fiscal gentleman about it in fact; even renegotiated to give his ex a cost-of-leaving escalation. . . . Once Mike started making big showbiz money, he couldn't stop: his final collaboration with Elaine May before they went separate if unequal ways was a 10-day improvisation session for commercials — which brought each about $250,000 a year.

Joe Levine has his first star for the prestigious "A Bridge Too Far," from the novel by the late Cornelius Ryan: Anthony Hopkins, certainly the past season's finest actor (in "Equus," and to illustrate the silliness of the Tony Awards — Hopkins wasn't even nominated!). . . . The entire production will be filmed abroad (80 per cent in the Netherlands, 20 per cent in England), but Joe wants at least three big American "names" such as Paul Newman, Robert Redford and Steve McQueen — "because American actors are bigger draws abroad than any foreigner in his own country or continent," Joe cannily analyzes.

The New York State Lottery definitely will produce a statewide TV spectacular within many months: the rules will be changed so that semi-final winners of relatively large cash prizes — probably $10,000 — will gather each week to have the TV cameras keep a lens on them while one is tapped for the final championship giveaway of $1,000,000.

The Corbett Monicas split. . . . Showbiz gadfly Leo Fuld swears he owns exclusive rights to Josephine Baker's life story and will go-acourting to sue NBC's planned TV film. . . . You don't have to be Italian: the Jewish Stage. Deli's wine carafes (now that the Stage has gone continental) are Volpolicella Bolla and Soave Bolla. We'll sip to that.

The stupidly-advised N.Y. cops and firemen labeled Gotham "Fear City" and some H'wood shrewdie registered their dreary misnamber for a movie quicker than you could say Sammy Glick; the police & fire union bosses, foolishly attaching that undeserved title on New York, couldn't be expected to be smart enough to register it to their profit. . . . Reminds us — we covered Brooklyn's famed Murder Inc., a story reported with unprecedented daily scoops by Harry Feeney, finest police reporter in N.Y. history, and written by the World-Telly's brilliant rewrite man Asa Bordages: Asa coined the "Murder Inc." title to describe kill-for-hire gangsters Lepke, Gurrah, Bugsy Siegel, etc. . . . Two days later someone told Asa to register it as the title for a H'wood film (all H'wood film titles are registered in the name of the first claimant) but "Murder Inc." had been snapped up about the moment Asa's story first hit the newsstands. . . . When he got around to having his own fine book filmed, Hymphrey Bogart starred, Asa couldn't use that imaginatively concise Bordages original — Asa's film was produced as "Brooklyn U.S.A."

"The Ritz" comedy's playwright Terrence McNally's next will be a "comedy about grand opera"; the last operatic comedy was the Marx Bros. "A Night at the Opera" . . . Britain's Duke of Kent sold off some $300,000 worth of family silver — simply because he needs the pound-sterling . . .

Ann Landers

Living together

Dear Ann Landers: I hope all those people who think living together is as good as or better than getting married will read this letter — and think again. I am in such a trap and I don't know what to do.

G. and I decided we were in love. He didn't want to get married again after two divorces (one was a real mess), and it was O.K. with me. That was seven years ago.

Our five-year-old son starts school in the fall. His name is the same as mine. I will have to go to school with him and write on the registration blank, son of Miss A.L. and G.O. How will it look?

Whenever I mention marriage, G. says, "I couldn't think more of you if you were my legal wife. Let's not spoil our beautiful relationship by getting married. I did that twice."

He really treats me royally, Ann, and he's crazy about the boy. Tell me what to do. —

No Ring Woman

Dear Woman: Give G. 10 days to make up his mind. Either you get a ring on your finger and that piece of paper in your hand, or it's goodbye. And make it stick.

If he loves you and the boy as much as you say, he'll marry you. If not, it's better that you know it now.

Dear Ann Landers: My brother telephoned me last night, quite upset. He said he had just received a note from the principal of his son's school saying Jerry, who is six years old and in the first grade, is known for picking on the other kids and makes a general nuisance of himself. The principal warned him that if Jerry hasn't settled down by the time school starts in the fall, he will be expelled.

Is it possible to expel a first grader? How can Jerry be helped? —

Concerned Uncle

Dear Uncle: A child whose anti-social behavior disrupts the classroom can be expelled no matter what the age.

Obviously your nephew needs counseling and so do his parents. Children who cannot get along with others and misbehave constantly are troubled. They seek attention outside the home because there are so few rewards in the home.

It would be helpful if you could establish a close relationship with Jerry so when he feels the need for help he can holler "Uncle."

Dear Ann Landers: I am very fond of a young man who needs psychiatric help. He has moods that are frightening. Sometimes he becomes so depressed I'm afraid he might take his life. Other times he is euphoric beyond description.

His temper is unpredictable. I never know before we meet whether he is going to be cheerful and affectionate, or glum and rejecting.

I've begged him to seek professional help (he can well afford the best) but he refuses. What can I do? —

Plenty Worried

Dear P.L.: Nothing. Unless a person recognizes the need and wants to avail himself of it, it's utterly hopeless. This goes for alcoholics, overeaters, chain-smokers — the whole kit and kaboodle. Nobody changes anybody. People have to change themselves. And it's the hardest work there is.

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to-earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex and How To Deal With It — A Guide For Teens And Their Parents." Send 50 cents in coin plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

The Federal Trade Commission is a group of suspicious little devils.

They have just come out with some guidelines regarding celebrities' endorsements of products which say if they claim they use a floor wax, a cold tablet, or a shampoo, they had better be telling the truth.

Golly, not for a minute did I ever suspect Joe Namath didn't wear pantyhose. I saw him play against the Redskins and no one can tell me he was in pain with bad knees. That boy had his pantyhose on backwards or I don't know pain when I see it.

I have always believed Euell Gibbons grazed for lunch. Mrs. Olsen is on a caffeine trip, and if Jane Russell's 18-hour braided, wouldn't we be the first to know?

The only one I can figure the FTC is after is Ann Blyth. Now, I've watched this beautiful little wispy creature for years . . . even before her performance in "Mildred Pierce," and if she ate a Twinkie, a cupcake, or a fruit pie, we'd see it.

I never look at Ann Blyth but I don't think of my baby picture. I was exactly her size when Mother took a picture of me in the buff on a shag rug. I was three months old at the time.

It strikes me as very suspicious that Ann is stuffing her face with all that "freshness" and looks like a pencil while I am wedged in a wicker chair eating salads with imitation mayonnaise.

The answer to more truth in advertising is to do away with taped commercials. They're made once and sometimes run as long as two or three years.

If they were made "live" we'd have a completely different story. I suspect after three months, Ann would set a tray of goodies out and turn green at the sight of them. After six months, her face would break out. After a year, she would waddle down the terrace, call the children and pop a doughnut into her mouth whole. After two years of hustling freshness, the kids would roll Ann down the terrace and take turns flipping Twinkies into her mouth.

I know I'm being silly. It'll never happen. David will continue to get headaches. Betty White will push onward as a stain fighter. And Sir Laurence Olivier, the most unlikely amateur photographer in North America, will continue to take perfect pictures.

But wouldn't it give America a real shot of integrity to turn on the tube one day and hear the perfect wife say, "I take good care of myself. I exercise, diet, and take iron once a day," and have her husband chime in with, "And I'd keep her if her girdle hadn't rusted!"

Saturn 1B rocket awaits final countdown for last manned flight

Apollo's sophistication far greater than Soyuz'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Comparing Russia's Soyuz spaceship to America's Apollo is like comparing a seagoing ferry to an ocean liner.

The Soyuz was designed to travel back and forth between Earth and orbit and it does it well. The Apollo was built to venture to a far more distant land — the moon — and it likewise has done its job well.

But because of their different jobs, there is a vast difference between the capabilities of the ships that will carry three astronauts and two cosmonauts to a rendezvous and linkup 136 miles high July 17.

The Apollo is bigger, carries far more fuel and is much more sophisticated technically than the Soyuz. As a result, the Apollo will be doing most of the work during the complicated rendezvous and docking operation.

There is even more difference between the two spaceships from a pilot's point of view. The Apollo was designed to be flown by men. It won't work without a pilot. The Soyuz on the other hand can and has flown just as well without men as with them.

This is the way veteran astronaut Eugene A. Cernan, Apollo-Soyuz technical adviser, sees it:

"When you look at the controls and displays and the ability that it gives the human being, and when you consider the amount of flexibility the pilot has in solving the problems that almost always exist on every spaceflight, the Apollo spacecraft is far, far more flexible and capable."

"The Soviet spacecraft was built with little or no capability for the pilot on board," said Cernan, who has worked in the Soyuz and who commanded the last Apollo moon flight. "Their philosophy was let's have 100 per cent control from the ground. Then as time went on they did begin to give the pilots some displays and some controls over, in a way, their own fate."

"To a pilot, someone like me being brought up on the philosophy of being part of what's going on and being able to make my own decisions, it's depressing in a way," Cernan said in an interview. "I don't mean it critically, it's just a fact of life."

The 15,000-pound, 25-foot long Soyuz is actually an assembly of three sections. Its nose is a ball shaped module in which the cosmonauts spent most of their time in orbit. It houses the ship's scientific equipment and has a hatch that will open to a special docking module that will be carried by the the Apollo.

Behind the orbital module of the Soyuz is the ship's descent vehicle. It has two form fitted couches and is used by the cosmonauts for launch and reentry into the atmosphere. The descent vehicle has a heat shield to ward off the searing heat of reentry and it carries a big orange and white striped parachute and braking jets to ease the cosmonauts back to a land landing.

The ship's electrical and main rocket systems are carried in an instrument module on the end of the assembly. This section also has two large wing-like solar panels that convert sunlight into electricity.

The 37,000-pound Apollo, 33 feet long without the docking module, consists of two sections — the three man command module and the cylindrical service module that houses its fuel, oxygen and hydrogen tanks. Unlike the Soyuz, the Apollo uses fuel cells which combine oxygen and hydrogen to generate electricity and produce drinking water.

The Apollo will use three parachutes to descent to a Pacific Ocean splashdown after it reenters the atmosphere. The Soyuz for the joint flight will be able to stay in orbit for only six days. The Apollo will stay aloft nine days although it was designed for 14 day missions and has stayed in space for up to 84 days when used as a ferry to the Skylab.

Joint space flight model for future

MOSCOW (UPI) — When American and Soviet spacemen sit down for their first meal together in space, they will be toasting not only scientific progress but a measure of the prevailing political climate.

The rendezvous of the Soviet and American spacecraft, a product of intricate cooperation between the two sides, is being hailed in the Soviet Union as a symbol of the new relationship between the Kremlin and Washington.

While it would be an exaggeration to portray the flight as an end to Soviet-American hostilities, such a project would be unthinkable in the tense atmosphere of the Cold War.

Gen. Vladimir Shatalov, the director of Soviet cosmonaut training, seemed to sum up the official Kremlin stand on the mission recently when it was clear everything was going smoothly.

"The flight is also of great political significance," he said. "The pooling of efforts in space exploration calls for mutual trust, mutual understanding and goodwill from both countries."

Shatalov predicted "the good beginning made on space routes will contribute to the implementation of joint projects in other fields, too."

In many ways the joint mission is a child of "detente" and all that the much abused label for improving East-West relations implies.

The Americans and Soviets have been cooperating in space since the early 1960s, emphasizing mainly the exchange of information obtained independently by each side.

The actual agreement for the joint mission was signed by former President Richard Nixon and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin in May, 1972, during Nixon's historic first summit with Soviet leaders.

The two sides established that space would be used only for peaceful purposes and agreed to symbolize this with a rendezvous of spacecraft in 1975.

It is an interesting barometer of the changing political climate that the space pact was largely in the background of such other agreements as those for nuclear arms limitation and improved trade.

Now, forces on each side accuse the other of violating terms of the nuclear agreement and the trade pact has been nullified by an angry Kremlin leadership after the U.S. Congress attempted to link the issue with emigration.

So the space agreement takes on added significance as one of the few agreements to remain concrete and intact three years after it was conceived.

Even a cursory reading of the controlled Soviet press suggests that the Kremlin has seized on the mission to express its feelings about the Soviet-American relationship.

The government newspaper 'Izvestia', for example, reminded the cosmonauts not long ago that they "should remember their success is connected with the hopes of all people of the world."

Leonid I. Brezhnev, the general secretary of the Communist party, was no less dramatic in his appraisal of the mission recently in a review of Soviet-American relations.

"The spacemen know that from space our planet looks even greater, though smaller. It is large enough so that we can live in peace, but too small to expose to the threat of nuclear war," he said.

According to Western diplomats, one thing about the mission that appeals greatly to the Soviets is that it stresses equality.

Every step of the mission since its inception has been carefully orchestrated to insure that the Soviet side does exactly as much as the Americans. Neither country stands taller than the other.

There are few events in the course of superpower politics than survive the delicate balance of equality that has been preserved for the space flight.

It is for this reason that the Soviets, in particular, hope to make it a model for future relations.

Surgery can correct aneurysm

What is an aneurysm of a blood vessel? Is it unusual for this to happen to a young person of 30 who has never been ill?

Miss E.L., Mo.

Dear Miss L.:

All blood vessels are lined with thin muscles. These expand and contract as blood is pumped through them. Occasionally, a weakened spot in the muscle produces a bubble, or aneurysm, on the outside of the blood vessel.

This resembles a large blister that sometimes appears on the inner tube of an automobile tire at the point where the rubber has become worn or weakened.

Aneurysms can be the result of disease, of injury or of a birth defect.

Rupture of an aneurysm is, of course, a dangerous condition. Control of the bleeding is urgent and can be accomplished when the condition is recognized immediately. The seriousness of the problem depends, too, on the location of the aneurysm and the size of the blood vessel that is involved.

An aneurysm in a young person who has not been in ill health is probably due to some congenital malformation.

Special surgical techniques can remove the diseased portion of an artery to prevent the imminent threat of a hemorrhage.

Dacron and other synthetic sleeves are used to replace arteries with aneurysms. The advances of this type of surgery have been enormous in the past 20 years.

My doctor performs a rectal examination each year. Does this mean he is suspicious of a cancer?

Mr. P.G., Nev.

Dear Mr. G.:

No general examination is really complete without a rectal examination. The only way to recognize an early growth is by performing this simple procedure.

The fact that your physician does this in no way indicates that a tumor or cancer is present. It satisfies him to know that there is no evidence of disease in this hidden area.

Your physician is wise and careful about the completeness of his general examination.

How submariners will do it

Nuclear war under sea

Editor's note: President Ford and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger have focused new attention on the U.S. atomic arsenal by their refusal to rule out first use of nuclear weapons in any future conflict. UPI Pentagon reporter John Milne recently spent time aboard a Poseidon ballistic missile submarine and spoke to men who would have to fight a nuclear war, should it ever come. His story follows.

By JOHN MILNE

ABOARD THE USS ALEXANDER HAMILTON (UPI) — The row of lights at the right-hand side of the control panel flickered in succession from red to yellow to green as the crew of this sleek, $91.2 million submarine showed how they would wage nuclear war.

The green lights meant ready to go: "Captain's Permission to Fire," "Silo Open," "Missile Ignition."

CPO I. A. Pope, in charge of the USS Alexander Hamilton's missile firing center, held what looked like a gun handle, with a trigger but no other parts, connected by a telephone cord to the console. He pulled it. The lights went blank.

"That's all there is," he said. "You don't feel much. There's just a whoosh, the ship shakes a little, and they're gone."

The one Pope pulled was black, for testing and demonstration. The real one is red, in a safe behind a combination lock. It can only be opened by two officers, acting together. The Hamilton can fire 16 Poseidon missiles in 30 minutes. Each one carries 10 separate warheads that could be fired at separate targets.

"Do you ever think about your mission, about nuclear war?" asked a reporter.

"All the time, sir, all the time," Pope replied.

The Alexander Hamilton, commissioned in 1963, looks more than any other ship like a weapon: low, lean and black. If there is a nuclear war, its missiles, with a range of about 3,000 miles, could hit 160 separate targets in the Soviet Union. Or anywhere else.

The missile-firing submarine is considered the safest and most stable nuclear deterrent.

Powered by a quiet nuclear reactor, it can stay under water indefinitely. It is hard to detect; the only thing worrying submariners is an enemy attack submarine.

Computers keep the missiles on target while the sub patrols an area said to encompass at least 700,000 square miles of ocean — 100,000 square miles greater than the area of Alaska.

The missiles are accurate enough to hit cities or "soft" military targets, but they aren't precise enough for a direct hit on a protected missile silo. This means an enemy does not have to worry about a so-called "counterforce" strike, a knock-out punch on his nuclear weapons.

The Alexander Hamilton has two separate crews, blue and gold, each with about 12 officers and 125 enlisted men. While one is on patrol, the other is ashore. They belong to an exclusive group that, as Adm. Hyman Rickover once was quoted as saying, has "6 per cent of the Navy's manpower and 60 per cent of its budget."

Chosen during basic training, the men must take rigorous tests to qualify. A full year of schooling is required before they can stand a watch on a submarine. They are bright and articulate, a dedicated group of men in a demanding job.

They are on patrol for about seven months straight. There is little communication, a line or two between a man and his family every once in a while.

because the submarine must be silent to be undetected. No newspapers, no mail.

Submariners can draw books from an extensive library, see about one movie a week, raid the refrigerator — the food is uncommonly good — listen to popular music over earphones.

One officer with a lot of submarine service said, "You find a number of higher ranking petty officers with family problems. They lost their families, they were orphans, something like that. We had a lot of college dropouts, kids who joined up because they wouldn't work at Dad's store or on the farm."

The family life that many never had is replaced by the fraternity under the sea. "It's pretty close," he said. "If you wash your underwear with your blues and the underwear comes out blue, everybody'll know it within an hour." The officer asked that he not be quoted by name and a Navy spokesman explained, "Submariners are a funny bunch."

Publication includes ESSC professor

EAST STROUDSBURG — Dr. Eugene S. Stine, professor of professional and secondary education at East Stroudsburg State College, will be included in the new, 15th edition of "Who's Who in the East."

This edition contains more than 18,000 names selected by Marquis Who's Who for inclusion. Dr. Stine joined the East Stroudsburg State College faculty in 1965 after serving as a research assistant at Lehigh University where he received both the Master of Arts and Doctor of Education degrees. He received the undergraduate degree from Kutztown State College.

Stine began a career in public education as a teacher in the Telford School District and had later served as a teacher and assistant principal in the Allentown School District and as an elementary supervisor in the Palmer Township School District.

He holds membership in numerous professional and civic organizations including Phi Delta Kappa, National Council of Teachers of English, American Educational Research Association, Edwin G. Martin Lodge F. and A.M., Lehigh Consistory and the Guthrie Rod and Gun Club.

Stine holds certification as an elementary teacher and principal and holds letters of eligibility for county and district associate or assistant superintendency positions. He lives with his wife and family in Bethlehem.

Pike 'Bicen' community

MILFORD — A mailgram has been received by the Pike County Bicentennial Office in Milford from U.S. Senator Richard S. Schweiker notifying the community that the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration has designated Pike County as a Bicentennial Community.

Now that Pike County has achieved Bicentennial Community status, government bodies and community organizations will be entitled to use special seals, fly the flag and other official insignia on buildings, at meetings and at Bicentennial events.

In commenting on the honor, Herb Moore, chairman of the Pike County Bicentennial Commission, stated that credit for the designation belongs to those organizations which have planned projects and events during the 175-76 period.

Oven overheats

CRESKO — An oven element overheated, causing a fire in a stove at the Brennan residence, Cresco R.D. 1 at about 5 p.m. Sunday, according to Pocono Mountain fire chief Dave Carey.

There were no injuries and the only damage was to the stove, Carey said. Approximately 12 men and one truck answered the call to assist one truck from Barrett Township. Carey explained the house was located on the border between the area covered by the two companies.

More fires cross Delaware Toll bridges

MORRISVILLE — Traffic for the first five months of 1975 on the six toll bridges run by the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission was up 7.54 per cent while revenue was down .59 per cent, according to its chairman John C. Baylor.

Baylor said 2,642,912 vehicles used the bridges during May, an increase of 76,980 vehicles compared to the same month last year. This is a three per cent increase.

Income for the month of May, 1975 totaled $585,807.30, a revenue decrease of 5.04 per cent when compared with the month of May last year.

Two face intoxication charges

SAYLORSBURG — Two Wind Gap men were cited for driving under the influence of alcohol following an accident Friday night.

State police at Fern Ridge said the driver of the car, David R. Snyder, 20, was cited. Also cited was the owner of the car, Kenneth P. Boo, 20, for letting another person drive his car while under the influence.

Police said Snyder lost control of the car at 6:45 p.m. Friday over a mile from Saylorsburg on Legislative Route 45004 in Ross Township.

The car reportedly ran into a ditch, causing $100 damages. No one was injured.

Accident leads to arrest

GILBERT — State Police at Fern Ridge said charges of failure to stop at a stop sign will be filed against a Lehigh-ton woman following an accident here Friday night.

Dorothy B. Wambald, 35, of Lehigh-ton, was to be charged after her car collided with a car driven by Elizabeth E. Stern, 48, of Easton, at 8:25 p.m. Friday.

Stern was taken by West End Ambulance to Palmerton Hospital where she was treated and released.

Police said the Wambald car was traveling east on Legislative Route 45003 when the driver failed to stop at the intersection with Route 209 and the car struck the Stern car which was headed south.

Damages were listed as $2,500 to the Wambald car and $1,100 to the Stern auto.

Handicapped kids ask 'How did you know?'

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

WHITE HAVEN — John Deviney's left leg gave way as he stood in the doorway of his cabin. He tottered, regained his balance and walked outside. Other than the brief falter, the 11-year-old looked like any other camper in Hickory Run State Park near White Haven Sunday.

Holding a red rubber ice pack on a swollen thumb, John slid down the cabin's outer wall and onto its creosote blackened front porch.

"What happened to your leg?" someone asked him.

"How did you know?" he asked, startled.

John, like some of the 89 other children camping in a special Pennsylvania Easter Seal Society camp for two weeks, was born crippled.

He first walked when he was seven, after an operation on his leg and one to install an arch in his left foot. John said he must go back for a second operation to have an arch implanted in his right foot.

"They were going to put braces on my feet. I said, 'Hold it.' I wanted to walk."

Although the black haired little boy from Norristown said he was used to immobility, he said he is glad to walk and happy to be at Camp Daddy Allen in Hickory Run State Park.

Children from all over Eastern Pennsylvania are camping at Camp Daddy Allen this week, running and wrestling like any other group of children between eight and 16.

During their "rest period" from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday, Paul locked a public relations man in a half nelson, David ran down a trail with one good leg and Canadian crutches and Dennis, sick from eating too many puddings, lost his lunch from the cabin's porch.

And Frank ran from counselor to counselor demanding that they hold him on their laps.

"With some of them, with just a little extra effort they could be useful instead of a burden," said Stan Graul, a middle-aged man from Harrisburg who serves as the director of public relations for the Pennsylvania Easter Seal Society.

Camp Daddy Allen, one of four in the state run by the Easter Seal Society, provides that extra attention, he said.

"You accomplish things here that you don't accomplish at home," said David Castellani, 13, of Peckville. "You make new friends. You learn how to make your own decisions," he said, leaning on his metal Canadian crutches with his back to a tree.

Most of the boys ignored their handicaps and were surprised when asked what had happened to their limbs. The 12-year-olds sat in their cabin arguing who was the youngest and biggest.

"They're okay until about 14," said Graul as he watched the campers file into the crafts lodge. "After that they become aware of their handicap. Can you imagine dating someone like that?" he asked, pointing sympathetically toward a youngster dragging a slightly lame foot down the trail.

The creases rimming his eyes showed there was more at stake in Camp Daddy than whether city children got some fresh air.

Nine Monroe Countians — seven children and two adults — are attending the two-week session to camp, cook out, hike, swim, play baseball and make Christmas presents.

Because today is Christmas at the camp that was founded in 1941, Rangers in the park even delivered a Christmas tree for the Easter Seal Society's version of the annual holiday.

New aging agency setup rejected

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

MILFORD — Commissioners, who comprise the governing board of the Tri-County Area Agency on Aging (AAA), have rejected a proposal by the executive director to establish an authority to run the AAA.

Believing the AAA office could run more smoothly under an authority's direction, Paul Sumner, executive director, suggested commissioners appoint a seven-member authority for staggered terms of office.

Commissioners, who attended the governing board meeting from Wayne, Pike and Monroe counties, unanimously rejected the proposal.

Monroe County Commissioner Arlington Martin said Sumner maintained that an authority would eliminate some of the burdensome funding approvals required for expenditures.

He requested that any purchase under $500 be approved by the AAA office rather than be approved by a majority of commissioners.

Warner Deputy, Pike County commissioners and chairman of the governing board, said it was the consensus of the commissioners that Sumner's proposal "would be writing too much of a blank check" for the agency.

Deputy explained that Sumner's proposal would have made the AAA an independent entity with its own purchasing laws and regulations.

"I believe Sumner views the present situation of going through county salary boards for funding approvals of smaller expenditures as burdensome and cumbersome," Deputy said.

"We are trying to get legislation drafted that would make AAA a single employer like MHMR (Mental Health and Mental Retardation Unit), but this might take a year or two," he added.

According to Deputy, if AAA were designated as a single employer most of the funding problems would be resolved.

Commissioners decided to retain the current procedure for approving expenditures; any small purchase is handled through the AAA office, expenditures over $500 require a majority approval of the boards of commissioners.

Commissioners did approve, however, a purchasing agreement that would allow the central AAA office to purchase items under $500 for the local county office.

For attitudes, actions on Tocks

Park Service criticized

STROUDSBURG — A group of Tocks Island Dam opponents has charged the National Park Service with blatant support of dam construction and called for a reversal in position by the federal agency.

Mina Haelele, president of the Delaware Valley Conservation Association, an anti-Tocks Island Dam lobby, presented a written statement containing 21 requests to National Park Service representatives present at a Four-County Task Force meeting Friday.

In her statement, Haelele urged the federal agency to take a formal position of opposition to what she termed "a project which in every detail contradicts the supposed purposes of the agency."

She accused the National Park Service of pretending to be neutral and awaiting the word of Congress when in the view of her organization, the agency should "play a key role in assuring that (Secretary of Interior Stanley K. Hathaway) does not vote for the Tocks project when he meets with the four governors."

The governors of New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania, along with the Secretary of Interior are commissioners of the Delaware River Basin Commission, which vote on the issue and make a recommendation to Congress, which has the final say on the project.

Other requests made by the Delaware Valley Conservation Association to the National Park Service were:

— To "cease all pro-Tocks propaganda in the park area."

Examples of propaganda cited were the signs at the Kittatiny headquarters buildings promoting the dam and the photographic display of historic buildings which have already been destroyed.

— Ask road map publishers not to list the Delaware Gap National Recreation Area on their maps until the agency is able to cope with the crowds.

— To transfer all NPS staff involved in cases of "harassment of local residents."

Examples were "stealing of signs from private property, the intentional refusal to pick up garbage from dam critics, the arresting of persons camping on their own private property, the instigation of false arrests, the awarding of special favors in the cutting of timber."

— That environmental education centers within the area not propagandize the dam.

— To preserve historic buildings by boarding them up. The Isaac Van Campen Inn has not been boarded up ostensibly due to lack of funds although a new headquarters building is being constructed.

— Hold public hearings as soon as possible on the recently completed master plan for the Tocks-Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

— Abide by the provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act and halt any further major capital construction in the area until a final environmental impact statement on the master plan has been prepared, reviewed and approved.

— Transfer the $1 million from the Mount Minsi road construction to salaries for additional park service personnel and sanitary and other facilities.

— Preserve historic buildings by permitting residents to remain until such a time as the fate of the region has been determined.

Happy birthday for first workshop home

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter

KRESGEVILLE — A group home on Honeymoon Hideaway Road has achieved its objective by its first anniversary.

The purpose of a group home is to prepare mentally and physically handicapped people to live on their own in the community.

The first woman to complete the program at the Kresgeville group home moved into her apartment this week, just before the home's first anniversary on July 22.

The home was established by the board of directors of the Burnley Workshop last year to help six women learn skills necessary for them to live in a place of their own.

The two house advisors do fewer of the household chores as the women take on more of the responsibilities, according to Mrs. Janice Joseph, group home coordinator for the Tri-County Mental Health-Mental Retardation.

Each woman sets a series of goals for herself after discussing with the project director and house advisors what skills she needs to improve.

"The goals might be to acquire a more appropriate wardrobe, use the phone independently, prepare meals or a few dishes and to sort the laundry," Mrs. Joseph explained.

Money management is one of the hardest skills to learn, she added.

Mrs. Mary Snyder, one of the house advisors, agreed and said the women are urged to learn to do things alone.

"I tried to get them to do things themselves, like going to the bank. I could have gone in with them, but I didn't when I knew they could take care of their banking themselves," she said.

The women do their own grocery shopping and meal planning when it's their turn to cook the week's meals and are encouraged to make their own doctor and dentist appointments.

Some of the women took adult evening courses at the Vo-Tech school where they studied flower arranging, making terrariums and cooking.

"The best part was that they were right in with everyone else," recalled Mrs. Snyder.

"They also learn to use all the services in the community rather than those set up especially for them. They're just taught everything they'd need to know if they were in their own apartment," Mrs. Joseph said.

Although the women understand when they come to the group home that the purpose is for them to leave and live on their own, they can select an alternative to living alone.

Project director William Johnson said two people may decide to share an apartment or live where there's an advisory couple in the area to give occasional assistance.

"There are many possibilities of where to go from here," he said.

One of the problems in the home comes from personality conflicts between the women, who work together as well as live together.

"The biggest problem is that they're together so much, 24 hours a day all week. It would put a strain on any relationship," Johnson said.

"There are personality problems among the residents but they're workable and to be expected," Mrs. Joseph added.

One pleasant surprise for the project's directors is that the program is costing less than expected.

Mrs. Joseph estimated the program operated at a cost of at least $10,000 less than budgeted the first year.

It costs $19 a day for each person at the group home compared with a daily cost of $30 to $31 a person at an institution.

Launch site garbage canned

BUSHKILL — The garbage was canned this weekend at a launching site in Bushkill run by the state Fish and Game Commission.

Unwisely refuse, strewn along the Delaware River last week, was picked up and hauled away, according to Joseph Bartley, Pike County waterways patrolman.

"The crew will attempt to keep the area clean before each weekend," Bartley said.

A taste of independence

KRESGEVILLE — The hamburgers were sizzling on the grill as Karen carried the potato salad from the house to the picnic table.

"You forgot the forks for the relish tray," Mrs. Mary Snyder called to the women still in the kitchen of the ranch-style home.

Mrs. Snyder is one of two resident house advisors for six women living in a group home program of the Tri-County Mental Health-Mental Retardation program.

"I'm not retarded," Beth stated firmly as she led guests from the basement to the kitchen.

Karen agreed. "They should use a different word. Maybe handicapped or disabled, but not retarded," she said.

"Only our guests smoke," she continued, glancing at a program assistant who came for dinner. "There were 15 people here for a party last week. That's the only time anyone smokes here."

One of the women was preparing to move from the group home where she had lived for a year into her own apartment.

She told everyone about the used bed and dishes she had bought with her savings.

"I feel 50-50 about leaving. I'm going to miss the house," she said softly as she went inside to finish packing.

Karen is also anxious to leave the home and move into an apartment in a month or so with some other people near her own age.

"I've lived on my own before. I managed pretty well on my own. I budgeted my money and bought my own food," she said, adding her problem was housekeeping.

Usually the women spend their evenings watching television, attending classes at the vo-tech school or going to community events.

One of the most popular activities is dancing. "It's hard trying to dance with three guys, not all at once, of course," Karen said.

"You know what I mean, trying to remember how they dance. Which one dances fast, which one dances slow and which one likes to calypso," she explained.

Most of the women are learning to play pinochle from house advisor Ralph Snyder.

Rampaging Reds roll up tenth straight victory

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Pete Rose's two-run single climaxed a four-run seventh inning that gave the Cincinnati Reds a 5-3 victory over the New York Mets Sunday and ran their winning streak to 10 consecutive games.

Will McEnaney, the second of four Reds' pitchers, gained his fourth victory in five decisions as the Reds came from behind for the 29th time this season. The victory, coupled with St. Louis' victory over the Dodgers, boosted the Reds lead to 12 1/2 games in the National League West.

Tom Seaver had a two-hit shutout going into the seventh when Joe Morgan walked to touch off the Reds' rally. Morgan stole his 39th base, went to third on a passed ball and with one out scored on Dan Driessen's double to left-center. Tony Perez went down swinging, but Cesar Geronimo followed with an infield hit. Dave Concepcion singled home Driessen and pinch-hitter Terry Crowley drew a walk to fill the bases, setting up Rose's game-winning hit off reliever Rick Baldwin.

Seaver, who had won eight in a row, suffered his fifth loss against 13 victories.

The Reds added an insurance run in the eighth when Morgan walked, stole second and scored on a single by Perez.

All three of the Mets' runs came in the first inning off Gary Nolan. Del Unser beat out a bunt, went to second on an infield out and scored on Ed Kranepool's single.

Watson doesn't wither in British Open playoff

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (UPI) — Tom Watson, using a new swing and putting to perfection despite persistent wind and rain, beat little-known Australian Jack Newton on the last green of an 18-hole playoff Sunday for the 104th British Open golf championship.

The victory earned Watson only $16,500—small pickings compared to prizes on the American professional circuit—but it was a morale-boosting dream of a lifetime for a player who until now had been known best for his blowups while leading the last two U.S. Opens.

"I had a goal in my life, to win a major championship, and now I've fulfilled it," the 25-year-old Stanford University graduate said. "I just thought my time had come."

The key to his round was a 25-foot chip shot that went in for an eagle at the par five 14th, giving him a one-stroke lead that he was later to lose with a bogey four at 16 and set up the final hole climax.

"Those are the kind of things where destiny shows," the Huck Finn character in a Scots' golf hat said of the chip. "Something like that shows certain people are destined to win."

Watson jumped to a two-stroke lead after two holes, but the advantage changed hands three times and the lead changed hands two more times before the decider.

Watson knifed a long iron to within three feet at the 464-yard second hole and sank the putt for a birdie three for his first advantage. He picked up the second stroke when Newton bunkered his approach to number three and missed a nine-footer.

The Stanford university psychology graduate suffered his only bogey of the front nine at five, where his drive caught a fairway trap, his scuffed second shot fell short, his third was trapped again and he had to sink a pressure-packed four-footer. The putt set the tone for his round.

"It was probably the second key hole of the round for me," he said later. "A double bogey would have completely wiped out that early lead."

Even so, Newton birdied the next hole with a head-on chip that left him an easy three-foot putt. The match carried on in even terms through the next seven holes as each man reeled off par after par.

Newton, the son of a Sydney detective who plays the British pro circuit but failed to qualify for the U.S. tour, jumped into the lead at the 478-yard par five 12th by reaching the green in two and two-putting.

He had trouble all day controlling his teeshots, pulling most of them to the left, and it happened again on Carnoustie's shortest hole, the 166-yard 13th, and cost him his one stroke advantage.

The rain and pressure increased together. Newton chomped on gum and smoked. Watson chewed an occasional fingernail. Neither spoke to one another after the handshaking pose for photographers.

Watson stepped out from under an umbrella to make the eagle, then, for the fifth time in the tournament, bogeyed the killer 235-yard, par three 16th. After both parred 17, the stage was set. Both men hit their drives on 18 dead center in the fairway, but Newton's long iron approach just caught the top edge of a green-front bunker and rolled back into the sand.

"I thought when I got the ball on the green, that if I got down in two, I had a chance to win the tournament," Watson said. "I was just trying to get that approach close."

A dejected Newton said, "I'm naturally very disappointed, but I didn't play too badly. Tom deserved to win...we were both a bit shaky at the start, but we both settled down."

The new champion, in his nationally televised acceptance speech, apologized for brusquely snapping at a movie cameraman who had started rolling his film just as Watson was hitting his tee shot on the third hole.

"I lost control," he said, "and I'm sorry. I apologize."

It was the only time during the four-hour match that the four-year-veteran of the American tour lost his cool.

The last day's attendance pushed the total for the tournament to near 100,000, a credit to the Scots' devotion to the sport during five days of rainy golf that produced not only a new course record, Newton's 65 on Thursday, but also broke Ben Hogan's 22-year-old record of 282 for an Open held at Carnoustie.

At the presentation ceremonies, Watson announced that he was giving his newly-won gold medal and silver cup to his wife Linda as a belated second wedding anniversary present.

"I didn't give her anything on Tuesday," he said. "But she said this would do as well."

Redman triumphs at Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — England's Brian Redman captured his second Formula 5000 win of 1975 Sunday at the Watkins Glen Grand Prix circuit.

Redman, last year's overall formula 5000 champion, took the checkered flag in his Lola a comfortable 33.9 seconds ahead of No. 2 finisher Al Unser.

Relative newcomer B.J. Swanson captured third place, piloting the Lola driven to victory by Redman in last year's series.

Redman grabbed the lead from countryman Jack Oliver halfway through the 30-lap event when Oliver's Shadow pulled off the track with engine failure. Oliver, the 1974 Can-Am champion, led the first 15 laps of the race, coming off a quick start from third position.

Oliver's Shadow teammate, Frenchman Jean Pierre Jarier, also left the track with engine problems. Jarier gave up 5th place in lap 11 when his engine died.

Pole-sitter Mario Andretti, who shattered the Glen's race lap record during the event's second qualifying heat earlier in the day, dropped from his No. 1 spot during the race's pace lap. Reports indicated his Lola suffered ignition problems. Andretti's pit crew fixed his Lola, but the former Indy 500 winner lost too much ground to finish any higher than 6th. In his attempt to catch the leaders, Andretti again broke the course race lap speed record, and was clocked at 122.774 mph.

Redman's win could be considered a triumph of reliability over speed. The Englishman and his Jim Hall-Carl Haas Lola racing team have failed to finish only one of their last 36 races. Redman averaged 119.22 mph during the 100-mile race. His victory at the Glen on the third leg of the nine-race series pushed him well into the lead among Formula 5000 drivers with 96 race points.

Redman's closest competitor in the series is Al Unser, with 48 points.

Andretti, who had hoped to challenge Redman's domination of the North American racing series with a win at the Glen, is third in the standings.

The formula 5000 finishers share $80,000 in prize money. Redman will collect $15,000 for his first-place finish and an additional $1,250 for first place in the race's preliminary heat.

WATSON'S THE WINNER — Tom Watson is all smiles as he receives congratulations from caddy Alfie Files. Watson won the British Open Sunday by defeating Australia's Jack Newton in an 18-hole playoff.

PGA rookie rallies to capture Quad Cities

MOLINE, Ill. (UPI) — Rookie Roger Maltbie picked up the largest check of his short golf career Sunday, coming out of the pack with a record-tying seven under par 64 to nip veteran Dave Eichelberger and win the $75,000 Quad Cities Open.

Maltbie, who got on the regular tour only last fall, won $15,000 for defeating Eichelberger by one stroke on the 6,400-yard Oakwood Country Club course with a nine under par 275.

Maltbie started the day seven strokes behind third-round leader Eichelberger, but he had picked them up by the end of the front nine. Eichelberger helped him by squandering away a three-stroke lead over the front nine to drop himself into a tie with Maltbie, rookie Howard Twitty and Terry Dill at six under.

Mark Hayes finished the tournament with a 69 and a 277 total to end up two strokes off the lead for third place. Gary McCord took fourth with a six under 278.

Rain delayed the start of the round for the second time in the tournament but Maltbie said the 75-minute shower helped him.

"It gave me time to reflect on my game," he said.

Maltbie, of Modesto, Calif., said afterwards he was "most concerned about my consistency, which hasn't been very good this year."

There was nothing wrong with his consistency Sunday. He started the day with an eagle and added five birdies over the next 17 holes, while Eichelberger, who picked up $8,550 for his second-place finish, ended the day with a one over par 72.

"I don't believe I could have won today without Dave Stockton and Homero Blancas," Maltbie said. "They were always patting me on the back and getting me thinking on the right track. That five-foot putt on the 18th green was the hardest in my life."

Blancas finished in a tie with Twitty and Terry Dill for fifth with a five-under 279. Stockton, the defending champion, ended with a 281 and a tie with four others for seventh.

A 1972 graduate of San Jose State, Maltbie had earned just under $20,000 so far this season before the Quad Cities Open.

He turned pro in 1973, winning the Northern California Open that year and the California State Open last year. His best finish on the regular tour this year was ninth at Houston.

Eichelberger, 31, was seeking only his second tournament victory, the first coming at the greater Milwaukee Open in 1971. He had been the leader since the second round.

Lake Naomi sailing club honors winners of regatta more and Blaine Parnell, Lasers.

David Fenimore and Rick Ross, Sunfish; were fourth and fifth place winners.

Bowls, donated in 1968 by Robert Steele of the Lake Naomi Club, were presented by Allen Rodriguez, commodore, at the Fourth of July Awards Reception in the Club House following the races.

Other awards presented were: The Geyer Memorial Bowl for Dusters in the Early Bird Series to Allen Rodriguez, and to Brooks Betz and Ignacio Zabaleta for Sunfish and Laser Early Bird Series.

The Geyer Memorial Bowl was donated in 1953 by Joseph and Charles Geyer in memory of their parents, Hannola and Joseph Geyer, Sr.

Second and third place winners were Jeff Wilhoite, Duster; Brian Betz and David Fenimore, Sunfish; and Didi Zabaleta and Stan Lamor, Lasers.

Bill Person, Duster fleet captain, and David Henry, former commodore, assisted in the presentations.

Placed in competition for the first time was the Liberated Ladies Trophy, which will be awarded in September, to the skipper with the most points accumulated in the Tuesday afternoon adult series.

This trophy was donated by Mrs. David Henry, vice-commodore, in recognition of the many women who have contributed to the growth of the Sailing Association.

Festivities for the Fourth were launched Friday afternoon with a series of family fun races arranged by Blaine Purnell, Sunfish Fleet captain, and his wife Ellen.

Winners were: Kristen and Loren Jones, canoe slalom for inexperienced canoeist; Ellen and Blaine Parnell, canoe slalom for experienced canoeist; Bob Fenimore, canoe jousting; Heather Fenimore and Maida Kaltenholer, Sunfish hand-paddling; and David Fenimore and Jamie Sarfert, Sunfish leap-frog-wheelbarrow-bubble gum special.

Friday evening the Club House bedecked with flags and flowers was the scene for the Commodore's Gala, a formal party which brought out a fine display of gold braid and nautical whites.

A bicentennial buffet was prepared by Chef Harry Christiansen with the evening affair hosted by Bill and Bea Wood, club managers.

Commodore Rodriguez gave a brief history of the Lake Naomi Club Sailing Association and encouraged all present to participate in the sailing activities both on and off the lake.

Mrs. Irene Miller Gross was introduced as the honored guest for the evening. Former commodore and Mrs. Horace Bromfield were also honored but were unable to attend.

Coming events were announced and will include the Duster Districts on Aug. 2 and 3. These are qualifying races for the National Championships being held at Union Lake, Millville, N.J., Aug. 23 and 24.

A Duster Invitational, open to all members of the Duster Class Yacht Racing Association, will be held at Lake Naomi, Sept. 6 and 7.

The first and second half series of races for all racing classes at Lake Naomi, with the next awards reception is scheduled for July 26. The junior instruction and racing program began July 7, Ladies Day instruction and the new mid-week adult series began July 8, and the Saturday Seminar of Racing Techniques began July 5.

A safety poster contest is being sponsored by the Sailing Association and the Recreation Committee for children of the community to inform and instruct them in lake safety and bicycle safety rules.

A bicycle clinic and movie were presented at the Lake Naomi Recreation Center, July 4, by Ranger John Sealand and assistant recreation director Nancy Olson.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — You can afford to be a bit daring now. Do something — anything — to lessen the depth of any possible rut in which you may find yourself.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Venus, favorable, stimulates your skills and talents. You should accomplish much. Keep the ball rolling, the door to opportunity open.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Mercury influences continue to stimulate movement, ideas for expansion. Get at basics, clearly understood ideas for planning and action.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Gains indicated from past good efforts. But don't rest on your laurels. Plan to benefit by the procedures which proved so profitable in the past.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — There is a present tendency to take on more activities than reasonable. You know what this has meant before; take steps to prevent it. Avoid anxiety.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — A day for optimism! You will receive unusual gains — most likely for having done exceptionally well in projects which called for some clever organization.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — An ideal day in which to gather in the fruits of past endeavors. Reward may come in the form of a promotion — with expanded prestige.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Take the necessary measures to protect certain economic interests which may have been threatened. You can do it, but you'll need a cool, level head.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Now's the time to make the effort toward the attainment of a major goal. You have plenty of stellar support to back you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Your outlook similar to that of Sagittarius. If you are bursting with self-confidence, as you should be, this is the day for gaining co-operation in putting over a pet project.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Several chances to do better than usual. Take advantage of all worthwhile opportunities. A good period to try out new ideas and methods.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Aspects now increase your desire for further recognition and prestige. Both can be attained by using a new approach. Don't stymie yourself by sticking to the traditional.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a warm personality, great dignity and graciousness, a sense of humor and immense practicality. You are more outgoing than many other Cancerians and could make a great success on the stage — especially in musical comedy. You could also succeed in literature.

a farsighted method of play that avoided either finesse.

He won the king of clubs with the ace, discarding a diamond, and continued with the jack of clubs on which he discarded another diamond. West could do no better than play a third round of clubs to dummy's ten, on which Urishohn discarded his queen of diamonds.

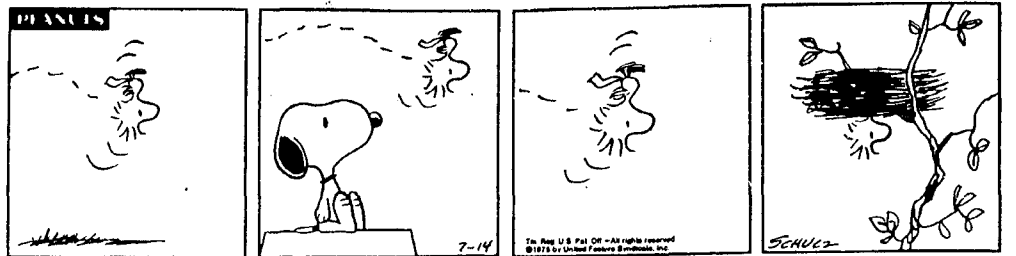

Pursuing his well-thought-out plan of play, declarer led a diamond to the ace followed by a trump to dummy's nine. Urishohn then ruffed a diamond, returned to dummy with a trump to the jack, and ruffed still another diamond.

As a result of all these maneuvers, dummy's seven of diamonds had by now become a trick. Urishohn returned to dummy with a trump to the ace, drawing East's last trump, and was then able to discard his queen of spades on the seven of diamonds to bring to a conclusion an unusually well-played hand.

In effect, declarer decided to rest his chances on a 3-2 diamond division rather than rely on either of the finesses he could have attempted. Resisting the magnetic attraction of finesses is often the backbone of good play, and Urishohn certainly passed his test with flying colors.

Opening lead - king of clubs.
Here is a hand played by Lazar Urishohn, South African star, some twenty years ago. It is difficult to see how he managed to make six hearts redoubled on the deal, but the fact is that he did so in spite of West's powerful holding in both spades and diamonds.

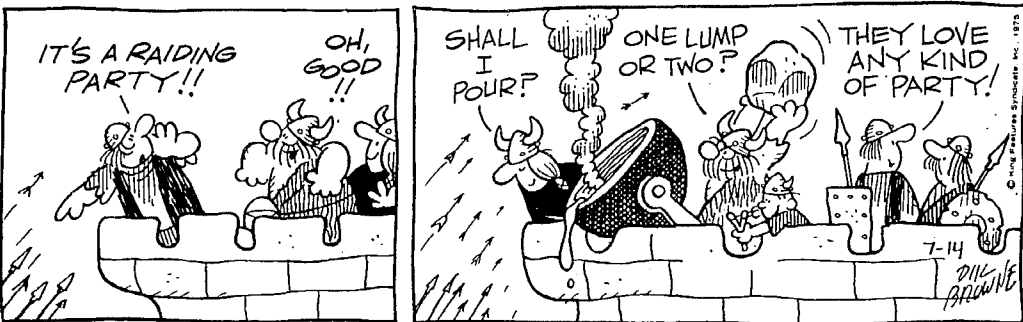

West led the king of clubs and Urishohn, recognizing from the bidding that the spade and diamond finesses would probably lose if attempted, adopted

'Cleopatra Jones' sequel panders to bigotry

By ROSALIND LISTON
United Press International

'Cleopatra Jones and the Casino of Gold' is the first major film to open at Harlem's famed Apollo Theatre on a first-run basis, but this saga of three macho-style women un-manning Hong Kong is an unfortunate choice to make movie history.

The Warner Bros. release, showing at the Apollo and two midtown movie houses, follows years of "moral pressure" from the black community for anti-run films and a federal anti-trust suit charging 14 distributors and exhibitors with restraint of trade in Manhattan. But what should have been a victory for the Apollo is, in fact, a bald and tasteless attempt to pander to racism. Bigots of every color can get their jollies from watching Cleopatra Jones (Tamara Dobson), a black U.S. narcotics agent, and her Chinese sidekick Mi Ling (Tanny) break up a dope ring headquartered in a casino owned by the Dragon Lady (blue-eyed, blonde-haired Stella Stevens). The Dragon Lady keeps the Yellow Peril under control by annihilating traitorous Chinese employees with her saber.

In scenes that would make even John Wayne shudder, Cleopatra Jones and Mi Ling subjugate and, in many cases, kill what appears to be half the male population of Hong Kong with gunfire, Chinese fighting techniques, and poison darts. Cleopatra sashays away from these life-and-death encounters in the latest fashions topped with a wide-brimmed hat, while back at the casino the Dragon Lady dallies with female lovers before gunning down a male colleague. Good triumphs over evil — after enough R-rated blood is spilled, of course — with the two Third World women destroying the casino and Cleopatra impaling the Dragon Lady on her own sword. The film has something for anyone enamored of violence, a monumental putdown of men in living technicolor, or racial overkill. But for the vast majority of moviegoers even the suspenseful pace of "Cleopatra Jones and the Casino of Gold" cannot overcome the deadly dialogue and stilted acting. The Apollo may have won the battle with at least one major distributor, but Warner Bros. sequel to the original "Cleopatra Jones" is just another chapter in the exploitation of the black community, which all too often loses the war. New Canadian film falls flat "Kamouraska" comes billed as "Canada's first all-out epic film and historical romance." It should be the last, at least until Canada's struggling film industry acquires a more inspired director than Montreal-born Claude Jutra. Genevieve Bujold, another French Canadian, is cast as the beautiful daughter of a bourgeois Quebec family of the late 19th century. She accepts marriage to the young master of Kamouraska, a nearby estate, only to realize he's a drunkard, womanizer and schizophrenic. She falls in love with a resident American doctor and eventually persuades him to kill her husband. The doctor carries out the murder but feels terrible about it and goes home to America forever. Miss Bujold lives on, feeling guilty. Any tension or interest in such goings on is lost under Jutra's mechanical direction, bewildering use of flashbacks and clumsy handling of what is basically a simple, non-epic plot. The script, in French with English subtitles, is dreadful ("It's a quiet night, like a glass of warm milk"). "Kamouraska's" skimpy budget shows, despite the often effective use of old houses and period costumes. And there's a deadly pacing to its two-hour length that is not helped by the performances of its principal actors.

times looks as embarrassed as she seemed in "Earthquake." French actor Philippe Leotard is only adequate as the master of Kamouraska. And Richard Jordan, the American actor who plays the doctor, is far less convincing than he later proved to be, gunning for Robert Mitchum in "The Friends of Eddie Coyle." He is just plain awkward in this performance, filmed in 1972.

'Raymonda' blend of original, his own

Nureyev version of ballet classic dazzling

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rudolf Nureyev, the dance world's triple threat man, has given American Ballet Theater audiences an old-fashioned but stunning version of the 77-year-old Russian classic, "Raymonda."

Drawing on his memory of the work as he performed it at the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad before his defection in 1961, Nureyev has blended the original Marius Petipa choreography with some of his own ideas for the three-act, full evening work. The result is a glorious recreation of ballet's Belle Epoque replete with pageantry, nobility of movement, and fairytale romance. "Raymonda's" only flaw is its bland dramatic impact. Since ABT is the nearest thing the United States has to a national ballet company, "Raymonda" will give pleasure to dance fans across the nation in the next few seasons. It probably will not have the same cast of superstars as the premiere at the New York State Theater early this month, but all of the ABT's lead dancers have star quality. Nureyev, who spreads himself thin as a guest artist with a number of ballet and modern dance companies, danced the role of the Christin crusader, Jean de Brienne, and the company's prima ballerina, Cynthia Gregory, was cast in the title role. The part of Abdul-Rakhman, the Saracen warrior who challenges Jean for Raymonda's hand (only a dream of Raymonda's in this version) was especially tailored for Erik Bruhn's return from three years' retirement due to ill health to dance with his one-time protegee, Nureyev. In spite of a sprained right ankle, Nureyev performed in his usual bravura fashion although his leaps and extensions are no longer extraordinary. Miss Gregory's technique is near-perfection, but her stylish dancing projects more ice than fire. Bruhn, now 46, was given little chance to dance solo but appeared to be a tamed Great Dane although his presence onstage always is heroic.

de ballet. The theme here is Hungarian, which serves ballet almost as well as the usual Polish or Spanish in establishing an exotic environment. Glazunov's eminently danceable score has its climax in a dazzling Cortège Hongrois. Dazzle is something that most American ballet companies can ill afford these inflationary days. The rich costumes in hues of reds, oranges, golds and peacock blues and the lavish medieval palace draperies and saracen banners were designed by Nicholas Georgiadis for a Zurich Opera House production several seasons ago and were acquired by the American Ballet Theater in limits of its straitened budget.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Price create new stage team

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — It isn't every play which begins rehearsals with the stars cooking lunch for the press. But not all plays star Vincent Price, who has built one of his several careers around his skill at the kitchen stove.

Price and his new bride, Coral Browne, share top billing in a new hang-the-expense London production of "Ardele," a bitter comedy about love by France's Jean Anouilh.

If for no other reason, the play is worth seeing for the brilliant dresses Robin Paye designed for Miss Browne, and for Alexander McPherson's lavish set. Luckily there are other reasons.

Three others are a bravura acting display by Charles Gray as a lecherous old general and two polished performances by the newest husband-and-wife team on stage, Mr. and Mrs. Price.

They married last October in California, and to hear the bride tell it, it was a pretty casual affair. "I had a telephone call offering me a part with Paul Newman in 'The Drowning Pool,'" she recalled. "It meant going to New Orleans on the following Monday, and as I was accepting I heard Vincent laughing in the kitchen."

"That was going to be your wedding day," he said.

"Anyway, when I got back he said, 'Let's get married tomorrow,' and we got into the car and drove to Santa Barbara."

"When we got back we had Maggie Smith and John Standing coming to dinner, so I put the marriage licence up on the mantelpiece so they'd know it was all right."

Miss Browne, born in Australia, has a long and distinguished career on the Broadway and London stages. But it can't quite match her husband's.

Price made his first stage appearance in London in 1935. In the 40 years since then he's been too busy doing other things to get back.

Like making more than 100 movies, and well over 1,000 television appearances, and another thousand-plus radio shows. Like lecturing in more than 300 cities, and gaining prominence in American art, and writing four books. And becoming a professional gourmet.

To kick off "Ardele," he and Miss Browne took over a smart London restaurant to give critics a minor demonstration of Price's culinary talents — pancakes stuffed with chicken and walnuts, with four separate sauces, and a superb salad of finely chopped raw vegetables.

"Finely chopped is right," Miss Browne said. "I chopped them."

"I told Vinnie we ought to look over the kitchen, but he said, 'No, a restaurant like that is bound to have everything. Well, one thing it doesn't have is a chopper. So I was it.'"

Miss Browne said it took no time at all to work out a cooking arrangement with her gourmet husband.

"When he's in the kitchen I leave him alone, and when I'm in the kitchen he leaves me alone," she said. "But come what may, he washes the dishes. He likes it."

Price confided the secret of his gorgeous salad dressing — "a touch of sesame oil makes all the difference" — and said there was one thing particularly which attracted him to "Ardele."

"There's not a word about food in it," he said.

NOTICE
Notice is hereby given, pursuant to the provisions of the Local Tax Enabling Act of 1965, as amended, that the Stroudsburg Area School District, Monroe County, Pennsylvania, intends to adopt a resolution levying a tax on individuals for the privilege of engaging in an occupation (occupational privilege tax) of $10.00, within the limits of the Stroudsburg Area School District, at a meeting of the Board of Directors of said School District, to be held on the 16th day of July, 1975, at 7:30 p.m., at 1110 West Main Street, Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania. The reason which, in the judgment of the Board of Directors of the Stroudsburg Area School District, necessitates the tax is that the present revenues of the School District are not sufficient to pay salary of the teaching staff, the cost of repairs and maintenance of equipment, furniture and buildings, the purchase of supplies, the cost of pupil transportation, and the cost to the School District of existing rental obligations. The amount of revenue estimated to be derived from this tax is the sum of $164,775.00.

Auction Sales 39

SALEM ST. PAUL LUTHERAN CHURCH STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL

Auction Sale Cakewalk
Tues. July 15
At 5:00 P.M.

RAIN DATE: Wed., July 16

in the village of Kresgeville, Monroe County, behind the Polk Township Firehouse in the Picnic Grove. The auction sale begins at 5:00 p.m. The auction consists of antiques, furniture, kitchen utensils, household goods, gadgets, coins, nicknacs, gems and junk, yesterday's trash and tomorrow's treasures. In the past, the members of the congregation have been very generous with donations of good saleable items to make this auction a success. Before the auction from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m. you may examine the goods to be sold.

Immediately after the auction sale the cakewalk begins. Dozens of cakes and goodies of all kinds have been donated by members of the congregation. These ladies are good cooks and bakers. From 4:00 on, refreshments will be served. Why cook home? Come to the strawberry festival and eat — then win a cake for dessert. All proceeds go to the ladies auxiliary of the Salem St. Paul Lutheran Church. Call Yosi — Auctioneer.

ALL ARE WELCOME

A&P meats come
"best side down"

Now you can see for yourself.

It's always been our policy to pack our meat better side down. So you will never be disappointed when you get home and unwrap it. Now, with our new transparent trays, you can see both sides of the meat before you buy it. And the meat stays neat, because the tray will not soften, break, or leak. We go through a lot to bring you what we think is the best in meat, and this new tray helps keep it that way.

AT A&P, WE WANT YOU TO SEE WHAT YOU'RE PAYING FOR.
